ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

MORAVIAN HISTORICAL SOCIETY,

SEPTEMBER 13, 1900.

The business meeting was called to order at 10:30 a. m., by Bro. Eugene Leibert, on whose motion Bro. Abraham S. Schropp was called to the chair in the absence of the President of the Society. Twenty members were present.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and adopted, and the reports of the Treasurer and Secretary were presented and accepted.

The following is an abstract of the Treasurer's Report for the year ending August 31, 1900.

The chief features of the Secretary's Report were the measures taken by the Executive Committee, in pursuance of a Resolution adopted at the last annual meeting in regard to the erection of monuments to mark the sites of the Indian Mission Stations, Meniolagomeka and Wechquetank, in Monroe County, Pennsylvania, and to ensure the publication of Bro. J. Taylor Hamilton's History of the Moravian Church.

A special committee, consisting of the brethren Eugene Leibert, Abraham S. Schropp, Frank Kunkel, Joseph A. Rice, and G. A. Schneebeli, was appointed to carry out the Monroe County monuments project. This committee at once proceeded to ascertain the exact sites of Meniolagomeka and Wechquetank, and to solicit contributions from members and friends of the society. They have secured the title to a suitable lot for a monument at Meniolagomeka, but their negotiations to obtain a similar piece of ground at Wechquetank has not, as yet, been successful. Up to this time contributions amounting to $324.50 have been received, and $40.07 have been expended. It is hoped that the monument at Meniolagomeka may be erected and dedicated during the coming year.

In order to secure the early publication of Bro. J. Taylor Hamilton's History of the Moravian Church, the Executive Committee gladly accepted a proposition, made by Bro. Hamilton, that this work be published as one Volume of the "Transactions," and it was agreed that the Society purchase a sufficient number of copies for distribution to the present members, and for future use, for which purpose an appropriation of five hundred and fifty dollars was made. This valuable work is now nearly ready, and it will be delivered to the life members of the Society as soon as received from the binder, and to the active and associate members on payment of their dues in full for the years 1900, 1901, and 1902.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

President, Rt. Rev. J. M. Levering.

Vice Presidents, Rt. Rev. Henry J. Van Vleck, Rev. Eugene Leibert, Rev. E. T. Kluge, Rev. W. H. Rice, Rev. M. W. Leibert, Rev. Arthur D. Thaeler, Wm. H. Jordan, Abraham R. Beck, Abraham S. Schropp, C. Otto Brunner.

Secretary and Treasurer, Frank Kunkel.

Librarian, Rev. Edward T. Kluge.

Managers, Joseph A. Rice, Granville Henry, Aug. H. Leibert, Wm. V. Knauss, Rev. Henry A. Jacobson.

Library Committee, Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, Rev. Charles A. Haehnle, John W. Jordan, Abraham S. Schropp, John F. Bardill, J. Fred. Wolle.

Publication Committee, Rev. Eugene Leibert, Rev. J. Taylor Hamilton, Robert Rau.

Graveyard Committee, C. E. Michael, G. A. Schneebeli.

The "Vesper," 2 p. m.

Bishop Levering having arrived since the forenoon, presided at this gathering. Grace having been sung, the collation was partaken of by one hundred and seventy members and guests—the largest number present on such an occasion.

The following members passed away during the year: Mrs. Henry B. Luckenbach, Francis E. Fenner, and Andrew A. Smith, and in announcing their departure, mention was made of the deaths, in previous years and in foreign countries, of J. Philip Lockwood and C. M. S. Leslie, information of which had not been received at the time.

The following papers were read:

"A Century Ago," by Bro. J. M. Levering.

"Wechquetank," by Bro. Eugene Leibert.

"A Brief Chapter on Ancestor Worship," by Bro. Robert Rau.

An interesting feature of the afternoon gathering was the presence of Bro. James M. Beck, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, who is a great great grandson of the distinguished missionary Bernhard Adam Grube. The latter had served faithfully and efficiently both at Meniolagomeka and Wechquetank, to which the attention of the Society has often been directed during the past year, and the latter of which formed the subject of the principal paper presented at this meeting, and the brief, but eloquent, address which Bro. Beck delivered, in response to enthusiastic calls, was received with all the greater interest on this account.

The following contributions to the Library and Museum were reported:—

From the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C., "Catalogue of Prehistoric Works," "Bibliography of Algonquin Languages," and five volumes of Annual Reports of the Bureau of Ethnology.

From the Wyoming Commemorative Association, a copy of its Proceedings.

From Garrick M. Harding, a copy of his address, entitled "The Old Sullivan Road."

From Wm. H. Jordan, Portraits in oil, by J. Augustus Beck, of Rt. Rev. Charles L. Moench, Rev. Clarence Eberman, Rev. Morris W. Leibert, Rev. Bernhard Adam Grube, Rev. Wm. H. Oerter, Rt. Rev. Edmund A. Oerter.

A collection of photographic views taken mainly in Bohemia, by Rev. James Hall.

The following have become members of the Society during the year:—

Life Member: William Wintersteen.

Active Members: Mrs. Mary de Schweinitz, Frank J. Buch, Miss Alice H. Bricker, Miss Martha M. Bricker, Oliver A. Clewell, Miss Annie O. Fenner, James S. Fry, E. Jacob Gerlach, Fred. J. Rice, Mrs. C. Senseman, Miss Martha Snyder, Mrs. Frank C. Stout.

Associate Members: Dr. Irving A. Bachman, Prof. Jos. F. Klein, Mrs. Wm. H. Milchsack.

At the close of the year there are seventy-six life members and two hundred and fifty-six active and associate members, making a total of three hundred and thirty-two.

ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

SEPTEMBER 18, 1901.

Twenty-one members attended the business meeting, which, in the absence of the President, was called to order by Bro. Eugene Leibert, on whose motion Bro. Abraham S. Schropp was chosen to preside.

After the reading and adoption of the minutes of the last annual meeting, the Treasurer's Report was presented, of which the following is an abstract:—

All the officers of last year were re-elected. (For list see Proceedings of annual meeting held September 13th, 1900.)

The "Vesper," 2 p. m.

One hundred and ten members and guests were present.

In the absence of the President, Bro. Eugene Leibert opened the exercises by calling on all to join in singing the usual grace, and after a suitable time had been allowed for the enjoyment of the meal, he read the names of those members of the Society who had passed away during the year, adding a tribute to the recently departed President, William McKinley. The following members have died since the last annual meeting: Massah M. Warner, Henry B. Luckenbach, Dr. William H. Egle, Mrs. Elizabeth (Krause) Schwarze, Mrs. James P. (Lehman) Snyder, and Miss Olivia S. Warner.

The following Resolutions, offered by Bro. C. A. Haehnle, were adopted by a rising vote:—

Resolved, by the Moravian Historical Society in annual session assembled, that we express our sincere sorrow and regret at the death of President McKinley, and hereby express our detestation of the act of murder, as well as of the teachings of anarchy.

Resolved, further, that in view of the Nation's great loss, and as a tribute of regard for the President's memory, these Resolutions be suitably inscribed upon the minutes of the Society, and duly published.

The following papers were read:—

"Humorous Reminiscences of Bethlehem and Nazareth," by Albert G. Rau.

"Something about Trombones and Trombonists," by Rev. E. T. Kluge.

"Account of the March of Napoleon's Army through Ebersdorf, Germany, October 6th to 14th, 1806." Translated by James F. Rice, read by Rev. C. A. Haehnle.

The following contributions to the Library and Museum were reported:—

A large number of books from various Government Departments at Washington, D. C.

"Historical Notes, Relating to the Pennsylvania Reformed Church," by Henry S. Dotterer.

"History of the Reformed Church in the United States," by Rev. Dr. James Good.

"Pioneer Women of Wyoming," by Dr. Frederic C. Johnson.

An ancient two-foot rule found in the cornice of the Whitfield House when the roof was renewed.

From William H. Jordan: Portraits in oil of Revs. Paul de Schweinitz, John H. Clewell, William H. Vogler, and Edward S. Wolle.

The following names have been added to the list of members of the Society since the last annual meeting:—

Active Members: Mrs. R. O. Beitel, Rev. George J. Crist, Rev. Samuel H. Gapp, H. H. Hacker, Mrs. C. A. Haehnle, Mrs. Eugene Leibert, Mrs. Herman A. Doster, Mrs. Caroline Detterer, Robert H. Rice, Miss Emma Stocker.

Associate Members: Mrs. S. S. Snyder, Robert H. Sayre.

Life Member: Harvard University.

There are now ninety-eight life members, and two hundred and forty active and associate members; in all three hundred and thirty-eight.

In Memoriam.

Francis E. Fenner.

Francis E. Fenner was one of the sons of Felix and Mary Crist Fenner, and was born at Bethlehem, Sept. 29, 1846.

He was of a kindly and genial nature and was possessed withal of good business qualifications. In 1883 he became associated with George W. Rhoad in the management of the South Bethlehem Supply Company, and few citizens of the community were more favorably known, or more highly esteemed.

In 1867 he married Emma Fenstermacher, who survives him with five children. After a brief, but severe illness he departed this life, Dec. 11, 1899. He was elected a member of the Historical Society in 1897.

Andrew A. Smith.

Mr. Andrew A. Smith departed at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on April 3, 1900, aged nearly 83 years, and his mortal remains were interred in Woodland Cemetery, Philadelphia, on the 7th.

Connected by marriage with the Moravian family of Wilhelm, formerly of Philadelphia, he became much attached to the Moravian Church and cordially supported and furthered the many benefactions for which this family has placed the Church under obligations.

He was a member of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, but in former times frequently conducted services in our Brooklyn Church. He became a member of the Historical Society in 1890. Mr. Smith was born in Berlin, Conn., in 1817, of Puritan forefathers. Both his grandfathers were prominent in the Revolutionary War, and one of them, Capt. Ebenezer Smith, was the officer detailed by Gen. Washington to guard Major Andre, the night before his execution.

Mr. Smith exerted a strong influence in the moral and religious life of Brooklyn, which city had been his home for sixty years. He was elected the first president of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., as also of the Sunday School Union. He was twice married. His first wife, Virginia Cruz Boyd, died in April, 1861. In 1866 he married Anna S. Wilhelm, who with two sons and two daughters survives him.

Mary Olivia Luckenbach.

In recording the antecedents of this beloved member of the Historical Society, whose departure from this life occurred Oct. 23, 1899, we recall the names of some of the earliest of the Moravian workers in this country. She was the great-granddaughter of John Christopher Pyrlaeus, missionary, linguist, and musician, and his wife, Susanna Benezet, daughter of Stephen Benezet, merchant, of Philadelphia. Her grandparents were John C. Pyrlaeus, Jr., and wife, Sarah Thorp. Her parents were John Lewis Pyrlaeus and wife, Margaret Jung. She was born in Bethlehem, Oct. 16, 1817. She served for several years as instructress in the Moravian Young Ladies' Seminary and was united in matrimony with Henry B. Luckenbach on March 8, 1838.

To this happy couple was alloted the unusual privilege of celebrating the 60th anniversary of their wedding day.

She became a member of the Historical Society in 1888.

Henry Benjamin Luckenbach.

This venerated and esteemed member of the Historical Society passed away after a brief illness on Jan. 12, 1901.

He was the son of Christian and Susan Heckewelder Luckenbach, she having been one of the daughters of the devoted missionary, John Heckewelder.

He was born in Bethlehem on Nov. 27, 1813, and in 1836 succeeded his father in the stove and tin-ware business and continued in active duties until about 1866. He was married to Mary Olivia Pyrlaeus in 1838, and they enjoyed an unusually long married life of 61 years, broken by the death of his beloved partner in October, 1899, a severe affliction to the aged husband.

He was an active factor in the incorporation of Bethlehem as a borough, as also in many of the industrial enterprises of the town. A connecting link, as it were, between the old regime of Bethlehem and the citizens of the newer town, he always took delight in old-time reminiscences and in the work of the Historical Society, of which he had been a member since 1887.

Massah M. Warner.

Prof. M. M. Warner, a son of Benjamin and Louisa Stotz Warner, was born in Salem, N. C., Jan. 9, 1836. After serving an apprenticeship at the printing trade in Salem, he spent a year in Philadelphia and 3 years in Leipsic, Germany, in the study of music, perfecting himself in this art and especially in the technique of piano-forte playing.

Returing to Philadelphia he took up music as his profession and served as organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Germantown, and later at the Woodland Church.

His genial disposition and his brilliant talents secured for him the warm friendship of a large circle of acquaintances.

He was married in 1869 to Celestina V. Reinke, a daughter of the late Bishop Samuel Reinke, and their union was blessed with a daughter and a son.

His death occurred very suddenly on Dec. 22, 1900, and his mortal remains were laid to rest on Nisky Hill Cemetery, at Bethlehem, on Christmas Day. His name was on the roll of members of the Society since 1888.

William H. Egle.

Dr. William H. Egle, well known and justly celebrated as an authority on Pennsylvania State history, was born in Harrisburg in 1830. His ancestors had settled in Philadelphia in 1740. He was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania in 1859, and in 1862 received the appointment of Surgeon of the Ninety-Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1887 he was made State Librarian, by Gov. Beaver, and served until January, 1899.

He edited the reprint of the Pennsylvania Archives and is the author of a History of Pennsylvania printed in 1876 and 1883. He was an honorary member of many historical societies, both of this country and of Europe.

He was a life member of the Moravian Historical Society since 1881.

He succumbed to an acute attack of pneumonia on the night of Feb. 19, 1901.

Elizabeth Augusta Schwarze.

Mrs. Schwarze was a daughter of Robert P. and Hortensia (Weber) Krause, and was born at Bethlehem, Nov. 27, 1864.

She ever took a lively interest in church work, serving as singer in the church choir and as teacher in the Sunday Schools.

On Aug. 22, 1899, she was married to the Rev. William N. Schwarze, then engaged in the Home Mission work in Alberta, Canada. Scarcely had she settled down in her new home, when her husband received the appointment of Director of the new seminary to be opened at Buxton Grove, Antigua, W. I., for the education of native ministers.

They reached their destination in mid-Summer of 1900, and a career of usefulness, for which she seemed eminently fitted, opened before them—but after a few months she was seized with an insiduous illness, which proved fatal on March 10, 1901.

Her remains were brought to Bethlehem and interred on Nisky Hill Cemetery.

She became a member of the Historical Society in 1894.

Adelaide Georgina Snyder.

Mrs. Snyder was the youngest child of Ernst L. and Angelica Paulus Lehman, and was born in Bethlehem, Feb. 2, 1851.

She was a pupil in the Moravian Parochial School and showed special aptitude in music, which she made her profession before and to some extent after her marriage.

She was united in wedlock to James P. Snyder, of Bath, Pa., which place was her home for the rest of her life.

She suffered a lingering illness until death came to her relief on March 21, 1901, the interment taking place at Bath. She is survived by her husband, a daughter, and a son. She was elected a member of the Historical Society in 1889.

Olivia S. Warner.

Miss Warner, the daughter of Benjamin and Louisa Stotz Warner, was born in Salem, N. C., Aug. 19, 1826. Here she received her early education and served for 20 years as teacher in the Young Ladies' Academy. At the close of the Civil War she entered the Seminary at Hope, Ind., then under the principalship of the Rev. Francis R. Holland, as teacher. After several years she removed to Bethlehem and made her home in the Sisters' House, where she resided until her death.

She made the teaching of piano music her life work and was favored with a large patronage, but owing to increasing infirmities, she was obliged to give up the profession about a year before her death, which occurred July 5, 1901. She joined the Historical Society in 1888.

DEDICATION

MONUMENT AT MENIOLAGOMEKA,

OCTOBER 22, 1901.

DEDICATION OF THE MONUMENT AT MENIOLAGOMEKA.

The twenty-second of October, 1901, a day perfect as to weather conditions, had been set for the dedication of the stone marking the site of the Delaware Indian town of Meniolagomeka, and more especially commemorating the self-denying labors of Grube, Bühninger, Schebosch, and Schmick, the devoted Moravian missionaries, who, from Jan. 1752 until May 1755, made their comfortless abode in this village, so picturesquely nestled in the valley of the Aquanschicola.

In pursuance with official announcements of the intended ceremonies, a goodly number of members and friends of the Moravian Historical Society gathered at Nazareth on the morning of the day and found ample carriage and omnibus accommodations in readiness to carry them across "the plains" of Moore Township, to that part of the Blue Mountains known by the misleading name of Smith's Gap, involving nevertheless, a long and difficult climb over the hills to the valley beyond. Shortly after noon the destination was reached and in a short time the party, clustering about the spring, was busily engaged in partaking of the mid-day lunch.

This finished, a procession was formed at the house of Benjamin Schmidt, the owner of the farm on which stands the monument, headed by a choir of seven trombonists from Bethlehem, and to the inspiring strains of Tune 230, marched several hundred yards to the stone.

The speakers and trombonists stood within the enclosure, while the audience, consisting, besides the sixty members of the Society, of over two hundred of the neighboring inhabitants, who had been invited to attend the ceremonies by the committee in charge, gathered about.

The order of exercises was as follows:—

The Te Deum Laudamus.

Hymn: "From the vast and veiled throng."

Reading of Psalm XLVI.

Hymn: "For all thy saints, O Lord."

Introductory remarks by Bishop J. M. Levering, President of the Society.

Hymn: "Glory to God, whose witness train."

Address by the Rev. C. A. Haehnle.

Prayer by the Rev. Arthur D. Thaeler.

Hymn: "Sing Hallelujah, praise the Lord."

Benediction.

The introductory remarks by Bishop Levering follow:—

Fellow members of the Moravian Historical Society, Ladies and Gentlemen: Permit me to cordially welcome you to these memorial exercises in which we reverently call to mind some almost forgotten associations of this spot. We dedicate this stone to the remembrance of events which, long ago, when the grandfathers of the oldest people here were but little children or were even yet unborn, made this neighborhood historic. Only six decades after the landing of William Penn, the father of Pennsylvania, the particular history of this locality called up by this occasion began. It came to an end more than twenty years before the liberty bell of Pennsylvania's Capital proclaimed the birth of American freedom. During that brief season the place wheron we stand was made holy ground by the labors and sacrifices, the prayers and tears of Moravian missionaries who here sought to bring the higher freedom from superstition and sin to the tawny, brawny braves who lived with their dusky wives in the wigwams of Meniolagomeka, who hunted the deer, the panther and the bear in the forests that covered these Kittatinny heights and the broad stretches of the Minnisinks, whose children snared and speared the trout in the limpid waters of the romantic Aquanshicola before they grew up to dread and hate the white man, before the sound of his voice bidding them move on, for he wanted their hunting grounds, had awakened in their hearts the wild, undisciplined revenge which at last made this lovely region the scene of awful atrocities and wrote the final chapter of Indian history in these parts with the blood of innocent and guilty alike. We remember today—and this stone will be the witness of it to every passerby—that before that blood of the slain dripping from the tomahawks of the sullen avengers cried unto God at the last struggle along the confines of the Forks of the Delaware, between the retreating race and the stronger one come in to crowd the weaker out, some white men who knew the better way to deal with the Indian problem, had come to this place with thoughts of peace—that peace which was made by the blood of the cross—and had taught the red men, who knew only the war song and the shouts of the savage dance and feast, to sing in their tents of the Saviour's blood and righteousness.

This stone will remind him who reads the inscription, that the love of Christ which constrained those missionaries made their converts from among the savages peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated. It will suggest to us that if the Government had from the beginning followed the plan of the missionary, hundreds of thousands of lives of white and red men, of women and children sacrificed in warfare would have been spared, millions of treasure consumed would have been saved to use for peaceful and honorable purposes, the Indian problem, of which we have heard so long and yet hear, would never have existed, the darkest stains on the grand escutcheon of our State and Nation would never have been to cause us shame, and there would be far more glory in the monument to the Prince of Peace reared in our Christian civilization. Long may this memorial stand to the honor of noble pioneers of the better way.

Address of the Rev. C. A. Haehnle.

Brother President, Brethren, and Friends:

A rude pile of stones, twelve in number, taken from the river's bed, marked the place where Israel crossed the Jordan. Joshua foresaw the day when future generations should point to that primitive monument and ask, "What mean ye by these stones?" They should be a perpetual memorial to Israel of the presence with them of Almighty God. All through their toilsome desert journey He had gone before them in a pillar of cloud by day, and at night He had been their fiery rear-guard. His hand had heaped up the waters of the Jordan, and Israel had passed over on dry ground. What God had been to them and what He had done for them were worth remembering.

That pile of stones should be the constant memorial of His grace and mercy.

We have met here today, not to cast up a rude cairn, but to dedicate a monument, which shall commemorate what God did with and for our brethren in days long gone; how He led them through a pathless wilderness; how He enabled them to establish here a church of Jesus Christ, among the aborigines of the land; and how, at last, in His wisdom, He permitted the flood of affliction to overwhelm, and to bear away on its relentless current, the work so laboriously, but so well established. Here, too, the question will be asked by generations yet unborn, "What mean ye by this stone?" The answer must be, that God was pleased to use the Brethren as the messengers of His grace in Christ Jesus to the savages of this land, and that they performed their duty with rare fidelity, with unflinching courage, and with heaven-crowned success.

Nor is this the only stone that marks a spot of historic interest and importance to the Brethren's Church. On a greensward, beside a stately Jesuit Church, in the ancient city of Reichenau, in Bohemia, stands a large stone which bears the significant Greek characters Alpha and Omega. Persons competent to form an opinion maintain that that stone was part of, perhaps the corner-stone of the church of the Ancient Brethren's Unity, which once crowned the hill-top. Ground was broken for that church in 1594, and the dedication took place in 1602. The stone referred to and a large bell in a neighboring tower are the only remnants left of that ancient house of worship. Though now in alien hands, yet that stone and its inscription mean much to the Brethren's Church. He who is the First and the Last, in whose sight a thousand years are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night, is the Rock of Ages upon which the Church is founded. He has shown us again and again that the gates of hell shall not prevail against that Church. True, the Ancient Brethren's Unity, like our Indian missions, was swept away by the wrath of man.

But on the outskirts of the village of Herrnhut, on the road to Zittau, now shaded by majestic trees, stands a granite monument, marking the spot where, on June 17, 1722, Christian David felled the first tree for the building of Herrnhut, the home of the resuscitated Brethren's Church. That stone likewise means much to us. It marks the beginning of a new epoch in the history of God's leadings of the Moravian Church. Led through the waters of affliction and the fires of persecution, the Church nevertheless had in it that spark of immortality which, by God's grace, enabled it to survive every vicissitude and trial, and to emerge from its baptism of fire and blood with its members ready to endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. As one studies the history of the period from 1732 to Zinzendorf's death, one is amazed, and even startled, at the world-wide plans of evangelization that were calmly discussed, and wherever possible put into intrepid execution. In 1735 an unsuccessful effort was made to establish a mission in Georgia, but in December, 1740, Bethlehem was founded. At once the missionary spirit asserted itself. It is not needful here to speak at length of the extent of the work among the Indians carried on by the Brethren. We recall the fact that at Shekomeko in New York, at Wechquadnach in Connecticut, at what was Gnadenhütten on the Mahony, at what was Friedenshütten on the Susquehanna, and at Gnadenhütten in Ohio, there are monuments, differing indeed in design, but all pointing to the missionary zeal of the Brethren. "What mean ye by these stones?" We mean to commemorate the fact that God used the Brethren's Church to spread the knowledge of the Gospel among a people who had not heard of the grace of God in Christ Jesus. We mean them to be memorials of the work done, of the trials borne, of the deaths suffered by our brethren and sisters in the faith, who counted not their lives dear unto themselves, but gladly suffered the loss of all things for Christ's sake and the Gospel's. That their numerous missions among the red men came to untimely ends was due to the fault neither of the Brethren, nor of their converts, but to the rapacity and wickedness of the white people. It is not pleasant to record the fact, but it is true, that nearly all of our missions to the Indians were closed not by the savagery of the aborigines, but by the madness and the badness of the whites. Our peaceful and peace-loving Brethren were sadly misunderstood and shamefully misrepresented. It is impossible for those not thoroughly versed in the history of the American Moravian Church prior to and during the Revolution to form any conception of the persecutions which the Brethren suffered. But persecutions neither frightened nor stayed them. They loved the "brown hearts" more tenderly and understood them better, perhaps than any one else. Men have heard more of John Eliot and of David Brainerd, than they have of Zeisberger, Post, Schebosch, Grube, Mack, Rauch, Heckewelder, and others, but nevertheless, these men of our own faith did as much, if not more, for the actual evangelization of the Indians, as those who represented larger households of faith, and whose deeds found earlier and it may be more eloquent narrators. David Zeisberger, the Apostle to the Indians, found in Bishop Edmund de Schweinitz, an able and eloquent historian, whose "Life and Times of David Zeisberger," is a classic in the literature of missions. In less degree called upon to stand before the world, but in no less degree faithful and heroic, the Brethren's Church counts among its missionaries to the Indians scores of men, who are unknown to fame, but whose names shine with glory in the pages of heaven's book of the immortals. Some of these men lived and worked here at Meniolagomeka. Should it be asked, "What mean ye by this stone?" we reply, that we mean, while reverently giving God the glory, to commemorate the services of those who labored here, and who, under God's blessing, were enabled to turn the savage from his savagery to humble fellowship with Jesus. The Indian village which once stood here, though but a small one, was a monument of grace. The very meagerness of detailed information goes to show that here there was good order and peace. It is impossible to adduce any new facts of importance with regard to Meniolagomeka. Long ago, in his invaluable "History of the Mission of the United Brethren among the Indians in North America," Bishop Loskiel gave all the substantial facts with regard to it. They were added to by the researches of Prof. Wm. C. Reichel and published in his "Memorials of the Moravian Church." Dr. J. Max Hark has drawn a graphic picture of the life of the village in his brochure entitled, "Meniolagomeka: Annals of a Moravian Indian Village," which is included in the publications of the Moravian Historical Society. Yet it seems proper today to rehearse once more, though briefly, what others have said, as we are gathered here to dedicate this stone to the memory of the white and brown brethren of Meniolagomeka. The connection of the Brethren with this place dates from Zinzendorf's first visit among the Indians. In the evening of July 24, 1742, Zinzendorf and seventeen others proceeded from Bethlehem to Nazareth, where the next day was spent. On the morning of the 26th, the following ten persons proceeded on a journey to the Indian country: Count Zinzendorf, his oldest daughter, the Countess Benigna, then in her seventeenth year; Anton Seyffert, Andrew Eschenbach, Henry Miller, Jacob Lischy, William Zander, and his wife, Johanna; Peter Miller, a boy, the brother of Zander's wife, and an Indian guide. After visiting Chief Tatamy on his reserve of 300 acres near the present Stockertown, they followed an Indian path which led them northward to the Minnisinks. Overtaken by a severe thunder-storm, they gladly accepted the invitation of a Delaware chief to occupy his hut, in order to dry their clothes and to pass the night. The next morning, July 27, at Tat's Gap, two and a half miles west of the Delaware Water Gap, they crossed the Blue Mountains. They passed on some ten miles farther to the north, until they reached an Indian village in Long Valley, where they camped for the night. After crossing Chestnut Hill mountain on the morning of July 28, the travelers came down into the narrow valley of the Aquanshicola, which they followed to a point about eight miles west of the Wind Gap. Here they came upon a small Indian village, Meniolagomeka—"the fat land in the midst of barrens."

We have no details concerning the reception accorded Zinzendorf and his companions by the Indians, but it must have been friendly. For, although no immediate steps were taken to organize a mission station here, yet frequent visits to Bethlehem, Nazareth, and later Gnadenhütten were made by the Indians, and they in turn were visited by various Brethren. In October, 1743, Anton Seyfferth, David Nitschmann, and Nathaniel Seidel came hither. In January, 1744, Seyfferth and Hagen came. In June, 1744, Peter Böhler and Henry Antes paid a visit to the place. In February, 1748, Christian Henry Rauch was here, and in the same year Bishop John M. DeWatteville passed through Meniolagomeka. After the establishment of Gnadenhütten in the Spring of 1746, these mutual visits became even more frequent. The word of grace found lodgment in the "brown hearts," and in 1748 the first convert, who received the name of Christian Renatus, was baptized at Gnadenhütten. On April 25, 1749, the chief of the village, George Rex, and his wife, were baptized by Bishop Cammerhof at Bethlehem. Brother Augustus and Sister Esther, as they were thenceforth known, became shining lights among the converts. Once, at Gnadenhütten, the wily Teedyuscung succeeded in luring Augustus astray, but he soon repented and was forgiven. The conversion and subsequent conduct of Augustus made a deep impression on the band, the most of whom soon followed his example. Meniolagomeka was consequently organized as a mission station, and in January, 1752, Bernhard Adam Grube became the first missionary in charge, being accompanied hither by Bishop Spangenberg. Grube may be taken as a type of the men whom the Church sent into mission service. Born in 1715, near Erfurt, in Germany, he was educated at Jena, and came to this country in the Irene in June, 1746. A man of fine scholarship, of musical ability, of sound judgment, and of intense devotion, he rendered most useful service both here and elsewhere. In the fifteen years spent in service among the Indians he endured many toils, privations and sufferings. At the time of his appointment he was not yet skilled in woodcraft, and met with a serious accident. He describes the experience as follows: "I attempted for the first time in my life to cut down a tree, and as I made the third stroke, the axe missed it and struck my left leg, making a dangerous wound from which I did not recover for six weeks. I could not walk, and had to creep about, and at night I could scarcely endure the cold in the Indian hut, for I had but one blanket and lay on a board, with a wooden bowl turned upside down for my pillow. I had been forced to use my pillow to bind up my wound." Eight days later Dr. J. M. Otto came from Bethlehem and dressed the wound. Grube thankfully records the love and friendship shown him by the Indians during this time. Meanwhile he applied himself to the study of the Delaware language, in which he became very proficient. The congregation received the most careful oversight, and every evening a service was held, to which the "brown hearts" came punctually and faithfully. Occasionally, during Grube's absence, Bro. Augustus conducted the service. Grube also conducted schools for the boys and girls, who showed a strong desire to learn, and made rapid progress.

His stay at Meniolagomeka was, however, but brief, for on June 21 of that same year, 1752,—his 38th birthday,—Grube received a summons to Bethlehem, brought by his friend, David Zeisberger.

Grube's successor here was John Joseph Bull, an interesting and romantic character, who is best known by his Indian name, Schebosh. His wife, Christiana, was a Delaware Indian, and he himself, in consequence of his long and intimate association with the red men seems to have acquired Indian-like traits. His stay was also short, for on October 1, 1752, he was accidentally shot by Brother Augustus. Dr. Otto was again summoned from Bethlehem, and decided to remove Schebosh to that place for treatment. The little flock was now pastorless until February, 1753, when that indefatigable and faithful missionary, Abraham Bühninger, was appointed to Meniolagomeka. A plan of the village at it was in December, 1753, is given by Reichel. There were three rows of huts arranged in parallel lines running from East to West. In the first row on the northern side there were three huts. In the second row were also three, the center one being the hut for the meetings and the abode of the missionaries. This was flanked on the east by the hut of Nathaniel and Priscilla, and on the west by that of Augustus and Esther. In the last row were five huts.

Dr. Hark gives Bühninger's record of the number of inhabitants at that time.

There were 59 souls in all, of whom 33 were baptized and 26 unbaptized.

In November, 1753, and again in February, 1755, Bühninger was temporarily appointed to other duties, and his place at Meniolagomeka was on both occasions supplied by John Joseph Smick and his wife.

Already in 1750, Richard Peters, the Secretary of the commonwealth, who claimed to own the land on which the village stood, had threatened to evict the Indians. The Brethren made every effort to buy the land, but Peters refused to sell. Now, in the Spring of 1755, he gave peremptory notice to vacate the land. It was a time of sore trial to the "brown hearts," whom the faithful Bühninger encouraged to trust in the providence of God. And God did mercifully open a way of deliverance. King Teedyuscung had succeeded in winning a number of followers at Gnadenhütten, who had left the mission, and their huts stood vacant. A cordial invitation to Bühninger and his homeless flock, to come to Gnadenhütten and occupy the abandoned huts, was gratefully accepted. With sad hearts the little band, carrying what they could with them, departed from their beloved Meniolagomeka on the 4th and 5th of May, 1755. In the bit of consecrated ground which had been set aside as a cemetery, four were buried, whose names deserve to be recorded here: Noah, the father of Augustus, aged 100 years, died June 29, 1749; Magdalena, wife of Joshua, died Nov. 1, 1750; Maria, 3 years old, died Oct. 26, 1750; and Christian, 8 years old, died May 24, 1753.

Thus closed the history of Meniolagomeka. Its very site was long forgotten, until on June 16, 1860, in pursuance of a resolution adopted in 1859, by the Moravian Historical Society, to seek out and to mark properly the mission grounds of the previous century, a company of eighteen persons from Bethlehem and Nazareth came hither and located the spot. Two years ago the Society took active steps towards the erection of a monument at this place. Today we are assembled to dedicate this stone to the memory of those who here lived and labored, and who here worshipped and served the Saviour. It is to His glory and to their remembrance that we erect this memorial. The busy world will take but scant notice of it, and in this sequestered glen but few pilgrims will seek it out. But even from the casual beholder it "implores the tribute of a passing sigh." The "brown hearts" are "gone on the mountain and lost to the forest." Swept away by the ruthless tide of the white man's invasion they have forever lost these hills and valleys that once were all their own. The weaker have fallen before the stronger. Injustice and inhumanity too often characterized the treatment of the Indians by the whites, but we rejoice that the Brethren knew how to deal with the Indians so as to uplift and save them. They did this only by the preaching of Christ and Him crucified, and by living out the doctrines which they preached. The uplifted Saviour drew the "brown hearts" unto Himself. Meniolagomeka, though it came to an untimely and pathetic end, was not a failure. Here the Cross had its triumphs. Here the Lord Jesus was loved and honored.

Here true men of God spent their strength to cultivate Immanuel's plains. Here a genuine Christianity triumphed by loving and peaceful means over heathenism and barbarity. Here virtue took the place of vice. Here the Light of the world shone into poor, darkened "brown hearts." Here the Bread of Life was broken to famishing souls. Here God was glorified. And this we mean by this stone.

The monument, of blue New Hampshire granite, erected on a solid foundation of concrete, is 8 feet high, 4 feet wide and 2 feet thick. It stands about 25 feet from the public highway and is a prominent feature in the landscape.

Upon the polished front is engraved the following legend:—

The site of Meniolagomeka,
A Moravian
Indian Mission Station,
1749—1755.
Erected by
The Moravian Historical Society.
A. D. 1901.

The return ride to Nazareth by way of Rosscommon and Wind Gap, although involving a detour of several miles, was much enjoyed by the party of pilgrims, while the half-hourly transit of the brilliantly illuminated electric car speeding by in the dusk of evening, now for Bangor, anon for Nazareth and Bethlehem, illustrated in striking contrast the rapidity and luxury of transportation of today compared with the laborious and wearisome foot-journeys made by the Moravian missionary from Meniolagomeka to the home of the "Pilger Gemeine," a hundred and fifty years ago.

In his Report the Secretary referred to the completion and dedication of the monument at Meniolagomeka. A pamphlet, Part I of Volume VII, giving a complete account of its construction and dedication has been issued by the Society.

It was further reported that the monument at Shekomeko is in good condition, while the one at Sharon has been slightly defaced, apparently by relic hunters. Of the Zeisberger Memorial and Sharon, O., graveyard, no reports were received. The monument on the Old Graveyard at Nazareth is in good condition.

The number of members on the Graveyard Committee was, on motion, increased from two to four.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

President, Bishop J. M. Levering.

Vice-Presidents, Bishop Henry J. Van Vleck, the Rev. Eugene Leibert, the Rev. Edward T. Kluge, the Rev. Wm. H. Rice, the Rev. M. W. Leibert, the Rev. A. D. Thaeler, Wm. H. Jordan, Abraham R. Beck, Abraham S. Schropp, C. Otto Brunner.

Secretary and Treasurer, Frank Kunkel.

Librarian, The Rev. Edward T. Kluge.

Managers, Joseph A. Rice, Granville Henry, Augustus H. Leibert, Wm. V. Knauss, the Rev. H. A. Jacobson.

Library Committee, The Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, the Rev. C. A. Haehnle, John W. Jordan, Abraham S. Schropp, John F. Bardill, J. Fred. Wolle.

Publication Committee, The Rev. Eugene Leibert, the Rev. J. Taylor Hamilton, Robert Rau.

Graveyard Committee, C. E. Michael, G. A. Schneebeli, S. R. Odenwelder, Frank R. Martin.

The "Vesper," 2 p. m.

Bishop Levering presided, and welcomed the eighty-six members and guests who were present in spite of the storm of rain and wind. Grace was sung and the collation enjoyed. Thereupon announcement was made of the departure, during the past year, of the following members: The Rev. Robert de Schweinitz, John N. Burger, Luke W. Brodhead, W. D. Holmes, Gustav A. Kern and Mrs. S. S. Snyder.

The following papers were read:

"When and under what circumstances the Moravian Historical Society was called into existence," by the Rev. E. T. Kluge.

"The Early Missions of the Moravian Church among the Cherokee Indians in Northern Georgia," by Henry T. Clauder.

"The Moravian Graveyards at Nazareth," by the Rev. E. T. Kluge.

The following contributions to the Museum were reported:

An Indian pestle and hatchet, from Calvin G. Beitel, of Easton.

A fragment from a hemlock coffin, from the grave of a Revolutionary soldier buried on the hillside in West Bethlehem, from an unnamed friend.

Trimmings from the catafalque and car that conveyed the remains of President Lincoln from Washington to Springfield, Ill., from Geo. L. Baum, Esq., of Bethlehem.

An old-time fly-brush from the sick-room of the Sisters' House at Bethlehem, and a sample of sewing by an Eskimo girl of Alaska, from Mrs. J. M. Levering.

A valuable piece of old embroidery, from Mrs. John Jordan.

Volume III of "The Perkiomen Region, Past and Present," edited by Henry S. Dotterer, from the author.

A doll's mitten, made by Sister Julianne Clewell, who had only one hand, from Miss Emma J. Miksch, of Nazareth.

A volume, "Luther, Zinzendorf and Wesley," by the Rev. P. Anstadt, D. D., from John W. Jordan.

An oil-painting of the Rev. Charles F. Kluge, presented by Wm. H. Jordan.

Memorial: "Wilkesbarre Conference, 1898," from the Rev. A. C. Wuchter, Gilbert's, Pa.

Report of the State Librarian of Pennsylvania, 1900.

Annual report of the Smithsonian Institution, 1901.

A complete set of the "Colonial Records."

A number of volumes from the various departments in Washington, D. C.

Also, a copying press formerly used in the Administration Office in Bethlehem, presented by Bro. Franz Gerstner, of Bethlehem.

The following members were added to the Society during the year:

Life Member: The New York State Library.

Active Members: The Rev. S. H. Gapp, Robert H. Rice, Mrs. S. S. Snyder, Harry E. Venter, Mrs. Frank H. Martin, Miss Elsie Bahnson, Miss Fannie M. Kunkel, Miss Eliza R. Luckenbach.

At the close of the year there were ninety-nine life and two hundred and thirty-six active and associate members, making a total of three hundred and thirty-five.

In Memoriam.

The Rev. Robert William de Schweinitz.

Robert William de Schweinitz, the son of Rev. Lewis David and Louisa Amalia Ledoux de Schweinitz, was born at Salem, N. C., Sept. 20th, 1819. In Nov., 1821, the family removed to Bethlehem, Pa., where both of his parents died. In 1830, he entered Nazareth Hall as a pupil and in 1835 became a student in the Theological Seminary, then at Nazareth, and after 1838 at Bethlehem. For six years he was a teacher at Nazareth Hall. In 1845 he made a visit in Europe, where, in July of the following year, he was united in matrimony with Marie Louise von Tschirschky, at Herrnhut, Saxony. Returning to this country with his bride, at the close of the year, they experienced a long and stormy voyage rendered more disagreeable by the running short of the store of provisions, due to the unexpected length of time consumed in the passage. In 1847, he entered upon a professorship in the Theological Seminary and in October of the same year, was ordained a Deacon and, in 1856, a Presbyter.

During the absence of Rev. John C. Jacobson, at the Synod of 1848, in Germany, Bro. de Schweinitz occupied his post as Principal of Nazareth Hall, from April to October. In the spring of 1849 he entered upon the pastorate of the congregation at Graceham, Md., but in September of the same year he was called as pastor to Lancaster, Pa.

In February, 1853, he took the principalship of the Salem Academy at Salem, N. C., where he spent thirteen years of arduous labor, difficulty and anxiety, the years preceding and during the struggle between the States of the North and South. The family history graphically describes the perplexities of those days: "Many of the wealthy Southern planters and Confederate Generals placed their daughters here for safe keeping; himself a strong Union man, it became a task of no little difficulty to supply three hundred souls in these dire times and many were the make-shifts that had to be resorted to, both for food and clothing."

The main building of the Academy erected under his administration and according to his plan, stands as an enduring memorial of his successful work.

In 1866 he accepted the Principalship of Nazareth Hall, but in the following year he was elected a member of the Provincial Elders' Conference at the Synod held at Lititz, which office he held for eleven years, and a second time for two years.

In 1882 he accepted the post of Receiver of all Church collections, having also for some years been the Treasurer of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Heathen and holding this office until 1899.

Failing health compelled him to resign from the various Treasurerships at this time; his increasing infirmities were followed by partial and at length total blindness.

Much suffering induced by Bright's disease compelled him to take to his bed on October 13th, and his merciful release came on October 29th, 1901. His age was 82 years, 1 month and 9 days.

John N. Burger.

The subject of this sketch, who had been a member of the Historical Society since 1880, was born at Villingen, Baden, Germany, May 12th, 1835. He was one of the charter members of the congregation in Elizabeth, N. J., and held office almost continuously, being a Trustee and the Treasurer for many years. He died February 26th, 1902, after an illness of nearly a year.

Luke Wills Brodhead.

Luke Wills Brodhead was born Sept. 12, 1821, in Smithfield Township, Monroe County, Penna. His parents were Luke and Elizabeth Wills Brodhead; his grandfather was Luke, one of the sons of Daniel Brodhead and his wife Esther Wyngart, who lived in Dansbury, now East Stroudsburg, whither they had come from Marbletown, N. Y.

It was this Daniel Brodhead, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, who was a firm friend of the Moravians, who encouraged them in their evangelistic labors in the Minnisink Valley, regarding himself as a Society member, entrusting his son Garret into the care of the Bethlehem school and who finally, in 1755, entered into his rest while on a visit to Bethlehem, whither he had gone for medical treatment.

His four sons were officers in the American army during the War of Independence; Luke, the grandfather of Luke Wills, ranking as captain in the battles of Long Island, Short Hills, Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth. Before the close of the Revolution he was commissioned a colonel.

Luke Wills Brodhead, at an early age, engaged in mercantile business at White Haven for twelve years; returning to the Delaware Water Gap, he was appointed Postmaster there and, at the end of his term of office, he shared with his brother the management of the Kittatinny House.

In 1872 he built the Water Gap House, which he conducted until the time of his death.

He was a man of more than ordinary ability and, by his genial personality, he made his house famous throughout the land.

He devoted much time and energy to the study of the records, historical and geological, of the Minnisink Valley, was a frequent contributor to the public press and in 1862 wrote a volume concerning the Delaware Water Gap.

He was a member of the Moravian Historical Society, the Historical Societies of Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Georgia and Kansas, the Minnisink Historical Society and the Numismatic and the Geographical Societies of Philadelphia. He was also a member of the Pennsylvania Society of Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Brodhead was twice married—in October, 1850, to Leonora Snyder, who departed in 1877, and in 1881 to Margaret D. Coolbaugh. His son, Dr. Cicero Brodhead, died in 1884, and two daughters, Mrs. John Ivison, of Coatesville, and Mrs. H. A. Croasdale, of Delaware Water Gap, together with his widow survive him.

He was an active and interested member of the Presbyterian Church and by his modest, generous, unselfish and courteous manner he made hosts of friends.

For some years he had been suffering from chronic bronchitis, although his final illness was very brief. He died on May 7, 1902, and his remains were laid to rest in the Water Gap Cemetery.

Sarah Sybilla Snyder.

Sarah Sybilla Snyder, m. n. Brunner, relict of the late John D. Snyder, departed this life at the Young Ladies' Seminary, Bethlehem, Pa., Wednesday, June 25, 1902, aged 63 years, 10 months and 17 days.

She was a daughter of Samuel and Charlotte Rudolphi Brunner. Her grandfather, Dr. John Rudolphi, after a few years' service on the Nicobar Islands, as Medical Missionary, came to Bethlehem, as one of the resident physicians, where he married Mary Magdalena Otto, a daughter of Dr. J. Matthew Otto. He later removed to Lititz, where he ended his days.

Mrs. Snyder was born in Bethlehem and reared in the schools of the Church. She was ever ready to devote her time, strength and ability to the various church enterprises. As a teacher in the Sunday-school, her faithful service will long be remembered by those who enjoyed her instruction and were influenced by her exemplary Christian deportment. Since her sad bereavement in 1892, when her husband was accidentally killed, her buoyant spirit was naturally crushed, but her affliction was borne with true Christian resignation.

The last six years of her life were spent at the Young Ladies' Seminary, where, as matron, she was a source of great blessing to the school. Her practical turn of mind and business capacity enabled her to manage her department with skill and economy, and her valuable services will long be gratefully remembered.

The funeral services were held in the church, Saturday, June 28, and interment was made in Nisky Hill Cemetery, amid a large concourse of relatives and friends.

Gustav Adolph Kern.

Gustav A. Kern, the son of Christian and Maria Elizabeth (Bishop) Kern, was born at Bethlehem, Pa., April 11, 1817.

When a young man he removed to Nazareth, where he spent the remainder of his life.

On July 18, 1858, he was married to Julianna Emilie Clewell, m. n. Danke, who died February 9, 1877.

On August 28, 1890, he married Lydia Pauline Rominger, m. n. Spaugh, who died April 9, 1902.

After a long period of illness, our venerable fellow-member of the Historical Society (which he had joined in 1858) departed this life at Nazareth, on August 3, 1902, aged 85 years, 3 months and 22 days.

SOME NOTES ON THE FAMILY OF WILLIAM PARSONS, THE FOUNDER OF EASTON, AND THEIR RELATION TO THE MORAVIAN CHURCH, WITH SOME CONNECTED MATTER.

BY J. M. LEVERING.

Those who have some acquaintance with the history of Pennsylvania, and particularly of Northampton County, during the decades which preceded the Revolutionary War, know that William Parsons was a prominent man and in some respects an interesting character. A few of the oft-published and generally known facts of his life may be mentioned briefly as an introduction to the things not so generally known of which this paper will treat.

He was born in England, May 6, 1701, learned shoe-making in his youth and came to Pennsylvania before he was of age. While working at his trade in Philadelphia, he read and studied diligently, so that in course of time he found his way into the society of educated persons and gained reputation as "a man having a profound knowledge of mathematics."

He was a member of the famous "Junto," a club formed by Benjamin Franklin, soon after his return from England in 1726, to discuss ethics, politics and natural philosophy. It was developed, in 1743, into the American Philosophical Society. Men like John Bartram, of botanical fame, and Thomas Godfrey, the mathematician and inventor of the quadrant, were among the early members of the club. Referring to its formation, Franklin, in a letter dated April 5, 1744, mentions Parsons as Geographer.

In 1743 Mr. Parsons was appointed Surveyor-General of Pennsylvania. This was a position of importance and profit which called his peculiar qualifications into exercise, but the physical hardships connected with it caused him to present his resignation in 1748. It was accepted on June 10, by the Provincial Council, which then appointed Nicholas Scull to the office. Scull was a son-in-law of Solomon Jennings, an early neighbor of the Moravian settlers at Bethlehem, who lived at the locality later known as the Geissinger Farms. Mr. Parsons then settled at Lancaster as a Justice of the Peace, but continued to survey at intervals.

May 9, 1750, he began, with Scull, to definitely lay out the town of Easton. He settled there after the erection of Northampton County out of the upper part of Bucks, by act of Assembly, March 11, 1752. He wrote to Secretary Peters, of Philadelphia, on December 3, of that year, that he had removed his family to the new town. The part of his family at that time with him consisted of two daughters, Johanna Grace and Juliana Sarah. With several servants and their household goods, they established themselves at "the Point of the Forks" to do the honors of the first official residence there.[1]

Parsons acted as agent at Easton of the Proprietaries of the Province, looking after their property interests in the region and promoting the sale and settlement of lands. He served as the first Prothonotary, Clerk of the Court,[2] Recorder, Clerk of the Commissioners and Justice of the Peace.

In 1754 he represented Northampton County in the Assembly and in 1755, was commissioned a Major of Continental Troops. During the Indian outbreak of that period, he bore the responsibility for the care of the imperiled infant settlement, and for a short time supervised the defences of the region. Through his personal efforts the first building for school and worship was erected at the new county-seat. He, therefore, well deserves the title that has been given him—"the Father of Easton." He ended his days there, December 17, 1757.

[1] The substantial stone house which Mr. Parsons built, in 1757, as his second residence, is still standing at the north-east corner of Fourth and Ferry Streets. In that house Governor Morris had his quarters during the Indian treaty of 1757, and there Parsons died a few months later. After his death it was occupied by George Taylor, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, who died there in 1781.

[2] Among some of his papers which, after his decease, came into the hands of Justice Timothy Horsfield, of Bethlehem, executor of his estate, there remains, in the Bethlehem archives, his commission as first Clerk of the Orphans' Court of Northampton County, inscribed on parchment. It was issued and signed for Thomas and Richard Penn, Proprietaries, by James Hamilton, Lieutenant Governor, "the Fifth Day of May in the Twenty Fifth Year of the Reign of King George the Second over Great Britain &c. and in the Year of our Lord, One Thousand, Seven Hundred and Fifty Two." It is endorsed as "entered in the Rolls Office at Philadelphia in Commission Book A. Vol. 2nd, Page 117, on the 6th day of May, 1752," by "C. Brockden, Dep." and bears the autograph of James Hamilton. It also shows evidence of later less dignified use in another inscription: "For Stocks, Notes, Sundrie People, Lehigh Navigation." It was used as a wrapper for a bundle of securities. The name of Eliza Horsfield, evidently owner of at least some of them, also appears on the back of it.

He always cherished a prejudice against the German race and until near the close of his life had a strong antipathy for the Moravians. He publicly maintained and represented to the Proprietaries that the proximity of the Moravian settlements was a detriment to the prosperity of the new county-seat and he put obstacles in the way of further acquisition of land in Northampton County by the Moravians. To prevent them from getting possession of large tracts of the "dry lands," between Bethlehem and Nazareth, his lesser prejudice yielded to the greater and he advocated selling them off in small tracts to the country "Dutchmen." During the last two years of his life his feelings in this respect changed and his attitude towards the people of Bethlehem and Nazareth became quite friendly.

Very little has appeared in print about his wife and children. All of them, excepting two who died in Philadelphia, were regularly connected with the Moravian Church. This fact indeed was both a root of bitterness in his heart which marred his domestic relations, and the secret of his long aversion to the Moravians.

The ancestry and connections of his wife are of some interest as are also the marriage relations of two of his daughters.

He was married at Philadelphia, in 1722, to Johanna Christiana Zeidig. Her father was John Julius Zeidig. Her mother was Salome Margaret Sprögel, a daughter of the Rev. John Henry Sprögel, a widely-known clergyman and educator of Quedlinburg, in the Saxon Province of Prussia.

Another daughter of Sprögel was the wife of the Rev. Gottfried Arnold, church historian and hymn-writer, some time professor at the University of Giessen and later pastor at Berleburg—a man of great learning, but disposed strongly to mysticism and theosophy and, like many of his time, in the attempt to put heart and life into the leathery scholasticism of Protestant orthodoxy, drifted into religious vagaries of which Berleburg was a center. The effects of this kind of religious atmosphere were imbibed by his wife's niece, the wife of Parsons, who was a representative of the type of piety which prevailed among so many of that period whose hearts cried out for nourishment and, failing to find it in the regular schools which assumed to dispense the Divine oracles, often fed their craving with morbid food. She seems to have had another aunt, Anna Elizabeth, who came to Pennsylvania and was married to a certain Hoppe. Two of her uncles were John Henry Sprögel and Ludwig Christian Sprögel—names familiar to the student of Pennsylvania history.

Mrs. Parsons states, in her autobiography, that her father was a pious man, but her mother—although a pietistic clergyman's daughter—was fond of gay society. They lived at Eisleben—Luther's birthplace—in the Kingdom of Saxony, but the subject of this sketch was born, May, 1699, at Quedlinburg, where her mother was temporarily sojourning. Her parents were later reduced to such poverty that she had to be cared for by relatives—from her tenth to her thirteenth year by her uncle, Gottfried Arnold, then residing at Berleburg, and after that by another uncle, a clergyman in Westphalia, whose name has not been ascertained.

She states that when she was seventeen years old, her uncle Sprögel—doubtless Ludwig Christian—arrived there from America on a visit and offered to bring her with him to this country. She gladly assented and, after taking leave of her uncle in Westphalia, she followed Sprögel by way of Amsterdam to England, where she embarked with him for Philadelphia. Nothing is on record concerning the five years of her life in Philadelphia prior to her marriage with William Parsons in 1722. She was probably under the care of one of the Sprögels.

The most conspicuous trait of her character that has come to light was the restless, somewhat morbid religious bent already alluded to. At Philadelphia she first affiliated with the Tunkers under Alexander Mack, without, as it seems, being immersed by them. She later sank into a state of spiritual distress in which, as she relates, she feared that she would lose her reason. She says that when she was married to Mr. Parsons she cherished great love and esteem for him, regarded him as much her superior, hoped to find true happiness in her union with him, but, being disappointed in her religious cravings, became despondent.

It seems that Parsons was, at that time, in nominal connection with the Lutheran Church, but was absorbed in studies and plans in the direction of his personal inclinations and ambitions, had no sympathy with fervent piety and was by temperament disqualified to appreciate the heart-yearnings of his German wife. She relates that she once disclosed her spiritual unrest to him and that he tried to soothe her with the assurance that it would subside, as he had found to be the case with himself. At other times she met indifference and even harshness from him.

Amid the babel of sects, she next came into contact with certain "French Prophets," who gave her books to read in which she thought for a while that she had found new light. This statement of Mrs. Parsons is interesting, because these enthusiasts are not commonly mentioned in enumerations of the sects which presented such a motley array in Pennsylvania in those days.

After vainly trying to sift out the truth for herself by comparing the many discordant teachings prevalent, she withdrew from all religious associations and became a Separatist, finally finding stoical satisfaction in a kind of Agnosticism. When the famous preacher George Whitefield came to Philadelphia, her uneasiness of mind and heart revived, but she found no permanent benefit in his sermons. Then came the Moravian evangelists, whose message struck a different key from any that had been heard. She was persuaded to attend their meetings and heard that which truly appealed to her. Her husband was bitterly opposed to them under the influence of the misrepresentation and calumny which had preceded them to Pennsylvania and the fear of damage to his popularity in certain quarters, which might result from his seeming to be associated with people who were denounced by those whose favor he was then courting. He forbade the members of his family to attend the services of the Brethren, and when his wife seemed disposed to do so nevertheless, he threatened to forsake her if she did not follow his wishes.

Her children became warmly attached to the little society gathered by the Brethren in Philadelphia, and she, at last, found what satisfied her heart in the preaching of the Rev. John Christopher Pyrlaeus who, as Count Zinzendorf's assistant, was ministering to a number of Lutherans who had been without a pastor, was finally mobbed by a rabble at the instigation of Zinzendorf's enemies and later became eminent in Indian linguistic work.

In 1745, Parsons really carried his threat into execution. Leaving his wife in Philadelphia, he took his two youngest daughters, Johanna Grace and Juliana Sarah, to a distant neighborhood on the Swatara Creek, where he owned a tract of land. There he placed them in charge of a quite irreligious woman while he was absent on surveying expeditions. When he resigned as Surveyor General and settled at Lancaster, he took them with him, but the following year yielded to their wishes and permitted them to return for a while to their mother in Philadelphia. The latter was baptized there by Bishop Cammerhoff in January, 1751, and admitted to the communicant membership of the Moravian Church. She and her husband were never re-united. At the time of his death in Easton in December, 1757, he intimated a desire to see her once more, but it was too late. He sent her a message expressing his deep regret that this could not be and telling her that her Saviour was now his Saviour and that he could die in peace. Mrs. Parsons removed to Bethlehem in 1769 and ended her days in the Widows' House at that place on March 10, 1773. She was the mother of six children, concerning whom the following facts have been collected from various sources:—

1. Susanna Parsons seems to have been the oldest daughter. Little is on record about her. She was never married. She apparently shared her mother's temperament and particular cast of religious thought and feeling, and was drawn by the services and preaching of the Brethren. The Rev. Thomas Yarrel, ministering in Philadelphia, makes the following statements about her in a report to the Executive Board—then styled Helpers' Conference—at Bethlehem: Referring to her as a sister of Robert Parsons, he says her father tried hard to bring about her marriage to a worldly-minded young man. He took her into the country and thought to divert her with all kinds of amusements, but she could not be satisfied. She returned to the city sick. Her illness increased and she expressed a wish to be baptized. This took place on October 13, O. S., 1746. The rite was performed by the Rev. Matthew Reuz in her father's house in the presence of the officials of the English Moravian Church of Philadelphia. Her father tolerated, but did not approve it, and declined to be present. Four days later—October 17—she died and her remains were interred in "the Potter's Field."

2. Robert Parsons, referred to in the above statement, is the subject of the following extract from a letter of Yarrel, entered in the minutes of the Helpers' Conference at Bethlehem, May $\frac{7}{18}$, 1746. "Three years ago he was spiritually awakened. His father was greatly provoked and threatened to disinherit him. He then remained away from the Brethren. His father placed him with a merchant to learn the business. His apprenticeship was nearly at an end and his father had built him a nice store. A short time ago he fell sick and was much distressed because he had disobeyed the Saviour and followed his father. He died on Sunday, April 27. Shortly before his death he was in a happy frame of mind and turned to the Saviour in much simplicity." His father, who sat by him, said to him, "Robert, use your reason! use your reason!"

3. Hannah Parsons Worrall, another daughter about whom little is known, departed this life in child-bed, according to the Moravian Church Diary of Philadelphia, January 20, 1753, in that city. Her husband seems to have been James Worrall. A son-in-law so named is mentioned in the will of Mr. Parsons, signed, December 15,[3] and proved at Philadelphia, December 21, 1757.

The diary states that a short time before, she dreamed that some one said to her, you have all your things nicely arranged, but you have forgotten the shroud, and that she took this as a sure omen of her approaching end. It is also recorded that before her death she asked her husband to take the wedding-ring from her finger and that when he did not do so, she took it off herself and, handing it to him, said, "My dear, you and I must part. We have not been together very long, but we must part. I am going to be married to another spouse (meaning the heavenly Bridegroom of the soul), but I suppose you do not understand this." The record adds that, thereupon, she departed and that this was the third of the children of Mrs. Parsons who had died a happy death.

3 The Bethlehem church diary has the following: "Dec. 15.—Mr. Parsons, the Prothonotary of our County, who seems to be near his end, notified his children, who were concerned about him, through Bro. Horsfield whom he always regarded as his good friend, that he had nothing against them and sent them his blessing. He also manifested appreciation of the kindness shown him by the Brethren."

4. Anna Mary Parsons, familiarly referred to in some records as Molly Parsons, was the third daughter. She was born in Philadelphia, but the date has not been ascertained. She was baptized there, January 30, 1745, by the Rev. Peter Boehler, later Bishop. She soon entered the service of the Moravian Church and, October 27, 1748, was formally and officially recognized as so engaged, and enrolled in the grade of Acolytes. She was one of the twenty-one Single Sisters who on November 13, 1748, removed together from Nazareth to Bethlehem, and on November 15 took possession of the original Sisters' House, previously the Brethren's House—the south-west corner section and oldest part of the mass of buildings on Church Street yet so styled.

She was married, March 31, 1756, to the Rev. Jacob Rogers, a widower. He had been a Deacon of the Church of England and joined the Moravian Church at Bedford in 1741. His first wife died in London, July 12, 1751. There he was ordained a Presbyter, February 14, 1752. He arrived at New York on the Moravian church-ship Irene, May 17, 1752. He served as one of the English preachers of the Church, principally in New York and Philadelphia, and performed much labor in translating and copying church documents. June 22, 1758, he started from Bethlehem with his wife for the Wachovia tract in North Carolina. This Moravian domain had, by act of Assembly, been constituted one of the parishes of North Carolina and, in honor of the Governor of that time, named Dobbs Parish. Rogers was installed as the first Rector of the parish. He thus became the English Moravian minister of the neighborhood. July 19, 1759, Mrs. Rogers died of fever at Bethabara, the first settlement on the tract. Rogers returned to Pennsylvania and in July, 1762, to England, where he died in the Spring of 1779. Their child, Johanna Salome, born December 10, 1758, at Bethabara, was brought to Bethlehem after her mother's death, by John Ettwein, and died there, September 14, 1769. William Parsons had no descendants, therefore, through this family. In accordance with his special request, Rogers officiated at his funeral, December 19, 1757, at Easton, which was attended by a number of persons from Bethlehem.[4]

5. Johanna Grace Parsons, commonly referred to in records and correspondence as Gracy Parsons, one of the two younger daughters whom their father took with him into the country and who were with him when he settled at Easton, was born in Philadelphia, November 28, 1736. She seems to have been his favorite daughter, and remained with him until danger from hostile Indians in November, 1755, induced him to send her back to Philadelphia to her mother and younger sister Sarah. Her journey on that occasion, enhanced in interest by her being the bearer of one of his official messages to the Government, was an episode, amid the thrilling and pathetic experiences of the time, which successive modern writers with a slim stock of facts, but aided by imagination, have developed, more and more, into a pretty picture with various embellishments.[5]

The authentic, original statements which form the basis are a passage in one of the letters of Mr. Parsons, published without date in Colonial Records, Vol. VI, p. 737, and an indorsement to another dated "Easton, Novr. the 30th, 1755," and published in Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. II, p. 534. Both are addressed to Secretary Peters. The first, written probably, November 27, follows one written to Governor Morris, November 25, referring to the massacre at Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning, of which he had just heard from Timothy Horsfield of Bethlehem; urging the importance of protecting Easton, Bethlehem and Nazareth, and begging for arms and ammunition. The letter of November 25 is published in Pennsylvania Archives, II, 515. That of November 27, referred to above, says "The powder and lead came to hand, but no letter, and I don't know what we shall do for want of arms." Then follows the passage which sister, Johanna Grace, visited him, having been notified by special messenger that he wished to see them. The diary of December 17, the day of his death, states that he gathered his children about him — their mother was in Philadelphia, unable to reach his bedside — and said to them that his religion was briefly stated: He believed that he was in the hands of a merciful God, through the merits and intercessions of a Mediator. Upon Him he placed his confidence and hoped that God would receive his spirit through Jesus the Mediator. December 22 it is noted that Timothy Horsfield and John Okely, of Bethlehem, were making an inventory of his estate, the former having been named as executor of his will.

5 See e. g. first, History of the Lehigh Valley, by M. S. Henry, p. 64; then Captain Ellis in History of Northampton County, Peter Fritts, Philadelphia and Reading, p. 148; and finally History of Easton, by the Rev. Uzal W. Condit, A.M., pp. 22–26.

alludes to his daughter: "If I can get a Waggon to bring my Daughter to Philadelphia, I will send her off immediately, by which Waggon may be sent Arms, etc., if any are to be had." The letter of November 30 begins: "Since writing my last, of the 27th Instant, everything remains pretty quiet." It refers to the latest reports, sets forth the danger of keeping certain Indian prisoners at Easton and complains of imposition upon Easton hospitality by Jerseymen, and adds in a postscript: "If we are not furnished with Supplys of Men, Arms, Ammunition and Provisions we shall not be able to hold our Ground." The interesting indorsement to this letter reads: "Wm. Parsons. 30 Novr, 1755. Rec'd Saturday Morn'g by Express, Grace Parsons." Either the date "November 30" should be November 29 or "Saturday" should be Sunday. November 30, 1755, was Advent Sunday.

These sources, however, establish the fact that Parsons carried out his intention of sending his daughter to Philadelphia and that she was the bearer of this letter of November 30 (29?) to Secretary Peters. Whether she made the journey in a wagon or on horseback is not stated. It is not probable that she went alone, as writers usually assume. It was not necessary for him to hazard his daughter's life by sending her alone. Messengers were frequently going to Philadelphia from Bethlehem and Easton and the two places were in constant communication. His principal purpose in sending his daughter to Philadelphia was to get her out of danger. The situation depicted by the elaborated descriptions of this episode is, to some extent, a fictitious one.

Grace Parsons remained with her mother in Philadelphia until May 2, 1757, when she removed to Bethlehem and became a resident of the Sisters' House. She and her sister Sarah were baptized together at Bethlehem on May 29, 1757, when she was given the additional name Johanna, and her sister, who before that was called simply Sarah, received the name Juliana. Their father was at that time an invalid and was away from home seeking restoration of his health. Grace was married at Bethlehem, July 29, 1758, to Nicholas Garrison, Jr., son of the famous Moravian sea captain, Nicholas Garrison, Sr., and himself a seaman at two different periods of his life. He possessed some skill in drawing and sketching, and executed several noted views of Moravian settlements. Their first child, John Nicholas,[6] was born at Bethlehem, October 26, 1760, and they seem to have had another son, Frederick. In 1762 they removed to Philadelphia, where Garrison engaged in business for some years. They appear in lists of Philadelphia Moravians as late as the close of 1778, when they are mentioned among the families who had fled from the city when it was captured by the British.

Later references to them in the records thus far examined are meager and fragmentary, and after 1780, when they were residents of Berks County, Pa., in connection with the Heidelberg Moravian congregation, no mention of them has been found.[7]

6. Juliana Sarah Parsons, the youngest daughter, usually called Sallie Parsons, was born in Philadelphia, November 19, 1738. Her brief autobiography contains the principal points of information about the movements of the family from the time when Parsons forsook his wife in Philadelphia, to his death at Easton. She expresses, in fervent language, her gratitude for the pleasing state of mind and heart in which her father passed away. When she was baptized at Bethlehem with her sister, Grace, in 1757, she was temporarily sojourning at the place. She removed from Philadelphia and became a permanent resi-

6 An autograph letter of August 13, 1774, from Mrs. Garrison to Bishop Nathanael Seidel, of Bethlehem, asking that this son, then in school, might be permitted to visit them, as her husband, then again following the sea, expected shortly to sail for St. Croix, is yet in existence. She expresses concern about her son's spiritual condition. He also became a sailor, and the Englishman who translated the "Voyage dans l' Amerique septentrionale dans les annees, 1780-1882," of the Marquis Francois Jean de Chastellux, who visited Bethlehem in 1782, refers to the young man in very uncomplimentary terms in a note. Nothing is known of the later career of this grandson of William Parsons.

7 A note furnished the compiler of this paper some years ago by Dr. John W. Jordan, of Philadelphia, refers to a deed made, May 10, 1779, by Nicholas and Johanna Garrison — she used only this name in later years — for a piece of property on Race Street, Philadelphia. Garrison describes himself as a mariner, "late of Philadelphia, but now of Reading-Town in the County of Berks." Official records refer to them as visiting in Bethlehem during the summer of 1780, when Mrs. Garrison was in failing health. There is also an allusion, in July of that year, to his intention, afterwards abandoned, of opening a store at Heidelberg. No descendants of Mr. Parsons through this line, after the second generation, have been heard of.

dent of the Bethlehem Sisters' House on February 24, 1758. She was then officially employed in church service in connection with the education and care of children.

October 14, 1766, she was married to Timothy Horsfield, Jr., son of Justice Timothy Horsfield and apothecary at Bethlehem. She was his second wife and was the mother of three sons. One son, Timothy, died in childhood. The other two were William, born, 1770, and died at Bethlehem, 1845, and Thomas, later a man of celebrity, born, 1773, and died, 1859, in London, England. A special note on him is added. She became a widow, April 11, 1789. In 1797 she removed to the Widows' House of Bethlehem, where she died, January 17, 1808.

Her son, William Horsfield, married Rebecca Weiss, daughter of Col. Jacob Weiss, the founder of Weissport, in Carbon County, the site of Fort Allen during the Indian War, 1755-56, and before that the second site of the Moravian Indian Mission, Gnadenhuetten. Horsfield kept store at Nazareth and Emmaus and passed his declining years at Bethlehem. He and his wife died only six days apart, he on February 8, and she on February 14, 1845. Their three children died before them, but they were survived by seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. The present posterity of William and Rebecca Horsfield are therefore descendants of William Parsons.

Thomas Horsfield, M.D., the second of the sons of Timothy and Juliana Sarah Horsfield, who grew to manhood, and the only other grandson of Mr. Parsons whose career is known, was born at Bethlehem, May 12, 1773. He received his early education in the boys' school of Bethlehem and in Nazareth Hall, pursued a course in pharmacy with his father in the apothecary establishment of Dr. Otto, at Bethlehem, devoting special attention also to botany, and later attended lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, where he took his degree. His thesis—"An Inaugural Dissertation for the Degree of Doctor of Medicine, submitted to the examination of the Rev. John Ewing, S. T. P. Provost, the Trustees and Medical Faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, on the 22nd day of May, 1798"—was entitled: "An Experimental Dissertation on the Rhus Vernix, Rhus Radicans and Rhus Glabrum, commonly known in Pennsylvania by the names of Poison-ash, Poison-vine and Common Sumach, by Thomas Horsfield, of Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, Member of the Medical and Chemical Societies of Philadelphia."[8]

Later he went to England and then to the East Indies in the service of the East India Company. He attained a distinct reputation in scientific circles, both as a practitioner and as an author. His extensive researches as a naturalist were pursued to a considerable extent on the Island of Java. His best-known publications are: Zoological Researches in Java, 1821-1824, and a second edition later; Lepidopterous Insects, 1857, and Plantae Javanicae Rariores—a description of his own collections in that island. He was the first librarian of the East India House in London, and had his home in that establishment until his death, July 24, 1859, in his 87th year. He was married in the East Indies and had two children, Charles Cooper Horsfield, and a daughter. Nothing further is known by the compiler of this paper about his posterity. He remained, to the end of his life, a devoted member of the Moravian Church and a faithful supporter of its mission work. The library of the Moravian Historical Society possesses an interesting and valuable memento of the venerable Dr. Horsfield; a volume from his library with his autograph presentation written on the fly-leaf, in a bold, steady hand, on May 27, 1859, only a few weeks before his death. It is a copy of the German "Larger Catechism"[9] of the ancient Unitas Fratrum, viz., that of 1554, translated by John Gyrck, together with the Latin of 1616.

If, sometime, the hitherto unpublished matter relating to William Parsons, which may be found in the collections of the

[8] In the archives at Bethlehem there is a copy of the Dissertation, a work of 88 pages, printed by Charles Cist, No. 104 North Second Street, Philadelphia, 1798. It was the property of Bishop Charles Gotthold Reichel, and contains his autograph with the note, "June 27, 1799, presented by Thomas Horsfield." On the inner fly-leaf stands, in the handwriting of the author, "For the Revd. Charles G. Reichel, with the best wishes of his friend, the author."

The Latin title reads: "Catechesis Christiana, ad Instituendam Piam Juventutem conscripta: in qua summa doctrinae Dei proponitur et explicatur. Ex Boemico idiomate in litinum translata. Anno Domini M.DC.XVI."

Historical Society of Pennsylvania and elsewhere, is drawn upon to present the man, his career and his connections more fully, the foregoing facts, gathered mostly from Moravian records, will have been made available for information which is not preserved anywhere else.

The tribute which Easton owes to his memory has been a subject of remark by different writers. The prominent connection of his family with the Moravian Church, in striking contrast with his personal attitude towards it for some years, has not been generally known. The association of the names of Parsons of Easton and Horsfield of Bethlehem in joint responsibilities of civil office, during the troubles of the French and Indian War, and then, also, in marriage relations, suggests various points of common historical and sentimental interest. That Parsons at one time jealously tried to prejudice the Penns against Bethlehem need not cause descendants of the Moravian fathers to view with indifference any tokens of regard which people of the county-seat may yet be disposed to show to the memory of him who "rocked Easton in her cradle and watched over her infant footsteps with paternal solicitude," if in some way his name should yet be exalted to new honor in connection with an enterprise which at its inception involved the prospect of a rude disturbance of his unheeded grave.

It so happened that the year and the month—May, 1901—which marked the bi-centennial anniversary of his birth, brought the announcement in the newspapers that the spot where his remains rested was to be sold "as a site for the free library that is to be established with the $50,000 that Andrew Carnegie has agreed to give the city." A more pretentious undertaking, forsooth, than the first institution in the interest of popular education which Parsons succeeded in erecting at Easton, and a larger gift than the £30 Pa. currency which he secured from the Trustees of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge among the Germans in America. Whether more significant and deserving of more credit, if the conditions and circumstances, then and now, are duly considered, this paper need not say. When the remains were disinterred from other graves, preparatory to commencing the structure, "Parson's body was left as a mark of special remembrance." The library building is completed, opened and dedicated, and some have wondered whether in some further way his name will not be associated with this new monument of progress in fostering that culture to which he and his cotemporaries at Bethlehem and Nazareth aspired, amid rude, back-woods surroundings. October 27, 1903, his grave was opened and his skeleton was found "well-preserved, though the bones had lain in the grave for 146 years." There is no irony in the statement that they were disinterred for the purpose of burying them deeper. It will not mean greater oblivion, but more distinct regard, in a grave conformable to the new grade of the improved grounds, and made more conspicuous by the arrangements for preserving it as a historic spot.

WECHQUETANK.

A Paper read before the Moravian Historical Society, Sept. 13, 1900.

BY EUGENE LEIBERT.

The site of Wechquetank, which forms the subject of this paper, lies in Monroe County, about six miles north of the Blue Mountain, and only sixteen miles, as the crow flies, north-northwest of Nazareth. It is midway between Stroudsburg on the northeast and Weissport on the southwest, being fifteen miles distant from each, and close by the present village of Gilbert. A few rods to the north of it flows what was formerly called the Pohopoko or Wechquetank Creek, and is now called the Big Creek, or Hoeth's Creek, after Frederic Hoeth, who was one of the first white settlers in that district. The valley drained by Hoeth's Creek, extending all the way to where it falls into the Lehigh, is styled the "Long Valley," and the portion of it immediately surrounding the site of Wechquetank is known as "Pleasant Valley," a title that has been well bestowed, for it presents a view of surpassing rural loveliness as you approach it from the south over the Wire ridge which separates it from the Valley of the Aquanshicola that skirts the northern base of the Kittatinny or Blue Mountain. The name Wechquetank is the Delaware Indian name of a species of willow that grows abundantly along the creek.

The region in which it is situated is of historic interest. It is included in the famous "Walking Purchase" of 1737, by which the Indians claimed that they were shamefully cheated out of a large portion of their best hunting grounds. It was traversed by Zinzendorf when he made his first journey of inspection among the red men, as early as 1742. He set out from Bethlehem on this journey on the 24th of July, accompanied by six brethren and two sisters, one of whom was his daughter Benigna, and an Indian who served as messenger and interpreter. Crossing the Kittatinny mountain a few miles west of the Delaware Water Gap, they reached the extreme northern point of their route on the 27th. This was an Indian village on the Pohopoko Creek, which had been the home of Captain Harris, a noted Delaware chief, and tradition places the site of this village on the very spot which was afterward known as Wechquetank. Thus as early as 1742 the place was occupied, even if only for one night, by a band of Moravians, with Zinzendorf himself as its leader; and the presence of his daughter Benigna, then only seventeen years of age, gives a romantic flavor to this first mention of the region in the annals of the church.

The old chief Harris who had lived there was the father of six sons, who figure more or less conspicuously in the early history of the Province of Pennsylvania, and of the Moravian Mission among the Indians. They were Teedyuscung, Captain John, young Captain Harris, Tom, Joe and Sam Evans. The first, Teedyuscung, was the noted leader of that portion of the Delawares which took up arms against the English during the French and Indian War, and it was he who planned the campaign against the settlers along the Blue Mountain that was marked by the most hideous cruelty and barbarity. Five years previous to the breaking out of the war he had professed to be touched by the preaching of the Moravian missionaries, and persuaded them to receive him among their converts. And when the war broke out, it was his minions who massacred the mission families at Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning, attacking them in the very house in which he had been baptized, and then burning it over the heads of its inmates, living and dead. Some of our historians deal very leniently with the misdeeds of this murderous and unscrupulous renegade—and de Schweinitz in his "Life and Times of Zeisberger," and notably Reichel in his many references to the chieftain, make, as it appears to this writer, entirely superfluous use of the broad mantle of charity. The latter can find no excuse for the bloodthirsty ingrate who, after witnessing the self-sacrificing devotion of the Brethren in their efforts to do good to the red men, and repeatedly experiencing, in his own person, their kindness and hospitality, and well knowing that they, both individually and collectively, were entirely innocent of any share in the real or fancied wrongs he sought to avenge, included them all in his plans of extermination, sent his warriors to murder their defenceless missionaries and women and children in their isolated farms and settlements, and would, if he could, have destroyed even the villages in the Barony of Nazareth, and Bethlehem itself, but for the palisades that surrounded them, and the armed guards who watched day and night, and who, in spite of their non-combatant principles, were prepared to shoot any of the murderous crew that might come skulking around their primitive but effective defences. This Teedyuscung was baptized at Gnadenhuetten on the 12th of March, 1750, when he received the name Gideon. The transaction is thus described by Reichel, in his usual charming style: "He was baptized in the little turreted chapel on the Mahoning, Bishop Cammerhoff administering the rite. The ceremony was performed in accordance with the solemn ritual observed among the Brethren at that time in the baptism of adults, and when the straight-limbed Delaware, robed in white, arose from bended knee, he rose as Gideon, the namesake of that son of Joash who threshed wheat in the wine-press to hide it from the Midianites." Viewing the occurrence from the standpoint of the writer, and in the light of the convert's subsequent career, it seems a pity to waste any fine writing on such a subject. Bishop Cammerhoff tersely describes it thus: "Heute taufte ich Tatiuskundt, ein κατ' ἐξοχην grosser Sünder." (Today I baptized Teedyuscung, a pre-eminently great sinner.) By this term the enthusiastic young Bishop of course referred to his previous career. He anticipated, from his hypocritical professions, that he would henceforth go to and fro among the converts as a pre-eminent Indian saint. But the expectation was not realized. He remained "ein κατ' ἐξοχην grosser Sünder," an unmitigated scoundrel, and did his full share of what led to the decline of the promising work of the Indian Mission. He came to a shocking end. He was burnt to death in 1763, while asleep in a drunken stupor in his lodge at Wyoming.

The other sons of old Captain Harris do not figure as prominently as Teedyuscung in our early annals, but several of them gave plenty of trouble to the Brethren, notably the second, Captain John. He was the chief of a Delaware village situated only a furlong to the south of this spot, near the intersection of Belvidere and Whitefield Streets. Like his brothers, he was forever raking up old grievances against the whites for their alleged robbery of the red men, and although there may have been some justice in their complaints of fraudulent treatment, as in the case of the Walking Purchase, none of them had any cause for dissatisfaction with the Brethren, who had scrupulously fulfilled all their obligations and promises to the Indians.

When the tract constituting the Barony of Nazareth came into the possession of the Brethren, Captain John insisted on remaining in his settlement, and as he could put in no valid claim to any title in the ground he occupied, he contended that the improvements he had made on it justified him in demanding a price for the land. To get rid of him, the Brethren finally agreed to indemnify him for his so-called improvements, and he retired with his followers from the vicinity, growling as he went.

Of Sam Evans, another son of Captain Harris, it is significantly recorded in the Diary of Wechquetank that, when he visited some relatives connected with the mission, it was necessary to make a careful investigation lest rum should have been smuggled into the village; and here and there we meet with notices of other sons of Captain Harris that are anything but flattering.

The account of this disreputable family has been introduced here simply because Wechquetank had once been its headquarters. When Zinzendorf and his company passed the night there he little dreamed of the trouble that would accrue to the Mission from Captain Harris' disgruntled progeny.

The next period in the history of Wechquetank begins in the year 1750. At that time some members of the Moravian Church in Philadelphia purchased land in the valley in which it is situated, and at least two of these, Frederick Hoeth and Philip Serfass, soon after removed thither with their families. The tracts purchased by Hoeth contained over 1,300 acres, and the smaller tract of Serfass lay not far away. Hoeth seems to have been an enterprising man and possessed of moderate means. Besides his own dwelling and barns, he erected a grist and saw-mill and a blacksmith shop, which were operated by employes occupying separate dwellings near his own. The Wechquetank, or Pohopoko, Creek, which furnished the water-power for his mill, began to be called by his name, and is known as Hoeth's Creek to this day.

When these Philadelphia Moravians first conceived the project of taking up land beyond the Blue Mountain, their design was severely discountenanced by the authorities of the congregation, who ascribed it to worldliness and the unhappy desire of becoming rich and great, and a disagreement ensued which, according to one historian, for awhile even threatened a disruption of the congregation. Hoeth seems to have been in specially bad odor, and was denounced as the "first contriver and chief promoter of the scheme" by the then pastor, who records his grief that Hoeth and the other brethren "who are possessed with the land spirit get together in the hall before service begins and talk about their land." Unfavorably as Hoeth was regarded for a season, the displeasure of the authorities was allayed by and by, and when he finally set out with his family on the 13th of November, 1750, to occupy his tract on the Pohopoko, it was, so to speak, with the benediction of the church, for, on the previous Sunday, he was permitted to give a farewell lovefeast to the whole congregation. In justice to Hoeth, it should be stated that this happy outcome of his disagreement with the church authorities in Philadelphia is not the only indication that the latter may have been mistaken in their estimate of his character and motives, for his daughter Marianna, in her autobiography, describes him as a pious and God-fearing man, whose concern for the spiritual welfare of his family first induced him to emigrate to America, and explicitly states that it was the same pious solicitude that led him to seek a home in the wilderness, where his children should be removed from the temptation and allurement of the world, from which he found they were not safe even in Philadelphia.

Nor was Hoeth and his family lost sight of by the Brethren after his emigration to Wechquetank. The region was familiar to them, for they often traversed it on their missionary expeditions to the Indians dwelling thereabouts and beyond. Indeed, only five miles south of it was Meniolagomeka, where for six years they preached the gospel to the Indians and founded a flourishing mission which, however, was broken up when, in 1755, the alleged owner of the land insisted on the removal of the converts, who were accordingly transferred to Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning. Now that Hoeth's little settlement was established at Wechquetank, the itinerants of the Brethren frequently called there and ministered to them in spiritual things. In 1753, Christian Boemper, of Bethlehem, married a daughter of Hoeth, and, the same year, settled on his tract of over 500 acres, his house being about half a mile distant from that of his father-in-law; and, in 1754, Philip Serfass, with his family, came up from Philadelphia and established his home near by; so that, when the Brethren visited there, they found quite a little company of their own household of faith to welcome them and receive their ministrations; and but for the brutal warfare soon to be waged against all the dwellers in the peaceful valley under the direction of Teedyuscung, the humble convert of five years ago, the settlement might, in the course of time, have become a center of Christian influence and activity. But this was not to be. On the 10th of December, 1755, a little more than a fortnight after the massacre at Gnadenhuetten, a band of marauding fiends surprised the dwellers on Hoeth's plantation at the time of the evening meal. In the first rush on the house they shot down Hoeth, who had always been the friend of their race, and had always treated them with kindness and hospitality; shot down and brutally mutilated his wife, who vainly tried to escape into the forest; shot down his little daughter toddling by her side; killed another girl and two unarmed men whose names have been lost; and then made off with Hoeth's remaining three daughters and the wife and two daughters of the blacksmith Heiss, before the men on the settlement and in the neighborhood could lay hold of their weapons and rally to oppose them. In their haste to avoid meeting foes on an equal footing, they did not fail, however, to set fire to all the buildings on the place, and also to Boemper's house, the inmates of which had meanwhile made their escape. As trophies of their intrepid bravery these noble red men carried off from this raid six scalps of six captives, and they lost but one of their number, shot by Heiss the blacksmith, who only failed for want of ammunition to send more of them to their happy hunting grounds.

Christian Boemper fled with his family to Bethlehem, and Philip Serfass and his family found safety in Nazareth, where he remained until the following Spring. The former, Boemper, however, soon after shared the fate of his father-in-law. He set out with a party of refugees under military escort, in January, 1756, to look after their farms and cattle, and was killed near the ruins of the mill by a party of Indians lurking in the neighborhood. The Serfass family, therefore, so far as we know, were the only members of the Church left in the neighborhood. Serfass died on his farm in 1786. His descendants are numerous, but we are not aware that any of them are now connected with the Moravian Church.

While the Brethren still continued to visit this family and such other settlers in the valley, otherwise destitute of the means of grace, as were glad to receive the bread of life which they dispensed, this savage raid put an end to any design that may have been entertained of making more permanent provision for the spiritual needs of the white inhabitants of the region. For four or five years the charred ruins of Boemper's home and of Hoeth's houses and mills and other buildings lay undisturbed, and their cleared and cultivated acres were overgrown with weeds and brambles. But not as yet was the spot destined to remain desolate, or to pass entirely into the hands of strangers. For a few years at least the name of the Redeemer was to be proclaimed and the blessings of His gospel dispensed, not as hitherto at long intervals only to the whites, but to a little band of red men who had elsewhere received and accepted the divine message and invitation brought them by the Moravian missionaries, and who here found a home and refuge, until they were again driven off, not as from Gnadenhuetten, by the allies of Teedyuscung, but by prejudiced and infuriated whites, who with singular blindness and obstinacy failed to discern between the good and the bad, and, on the principle that the only good Indian is a dead Indian, were bent on massacring every man, woman and child of the harmless and inoffensive band.

The third period of the history of Wechquetank begins in 1760. Early in that year it was determined to establish a settlement for a portion of the Indian converts who, after the destruction of Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning, had been provided for in the neighborhood of Bethlehem and Nazareth, and the lands of Hoeth and Boemper at Wechquetank were deemed a suitable place for this purpose. They were accordingly purchased by the Church from the administrator of both estates, after having been inspected by Matthew Schropp and George Klein. The two tracts together contained nearly 1,400 acres.

Just why the Brethren determined to establish the mission station at Wechquetank the writer has not been able to ascertain. The number of its inhabitants never exceeded thirty-five or forty, and it would seem as if so small a company might have been cared for with less trouble and expense at Nain, near Bethlehem, where the other refugees dwelt, than at a point nearly thirty miles distant. There is no record in the rather voluminous diary kept by the missionaries in charge, of any efforts to reach other Indians as yet un-Christianized, to indicate that Wechquetank was to be a starting point, or a sort of outpost in their plan of campaign. The Bethlehem diary states that upwards of thirty Indians from Nain were to be colonized there, while Heckewelder declares explicitly that the Wechquetank station was established for the accommodation of those Indian refugees who had, up to this time, been quartered at Gnadenthal, near Nazareth. According to Heckewelder, the Indians who occupied Nain were all of the Mohican tribe, while those quartered at Gnadenthal were Delawares and Monseys, and the latter were not so far advanced in husbandry as the former, who had been the first converts, although not inferior to them in moral character. Possibly tribal peculiarities and differences may have made the separation desirable.

Whatever may have been the reasons for establishing the station at Wechquetank, all the arrangements for its settlement were completed in April, 1760. On the 24th of that month the missionaries Joachim Senseman and John Joseph Bull, otherwise called Shebosh, set out from Nain for Christianspring, where they received their final instructions from Bro. Peter Boehler, and then proceeded on their way with their company of Indians, camping that night at the Rose Tavern. Towards evening the next day they reached Wechquetank. The Indians prepared to spend the night along one of the fences left standing on Hoeth's place, while the missionaries went on a little farther to Boemper's plantation, where they put up their horses, part of the stable, with the crib, having escaped destruction at the time of the raid. Before lying down to rest, Bro. Senseman held a short service, in which he discoursed of the nearness of the Saviour to every soul that earnestly desires His presence, and wished for the members of the little flock such a sincere and constant longing as would always keep them in communion with Him. The Indian brethren made arrangements to set out early the next morning on a hunting expedition and then all lay down to sleep. The hunt was successful, for the Indians returned from it early in the forenoon with two deer that they had shot, which was sufficient to supply the party with fresh meat for several days. Then all proceeded to erect huts on the site selected by Senseman for the village, which was close by a fine spring. In a few days the dwellings were ready for occupancy and the place soon assumed the character of a fully organized Moravian mission station. The company that had first come with Senseman and Shebosh appears to have been only the pioneers in the undertaking, for the diary records the arrival of others at intervals during the month of May who were to dwell in Wechquetank. Ground was at once prepared for planting corn and the fences repaired. Up to the end of June the daily morning and evening devotions and the services on Sundays were held in one of the houses, presumably that of the missionaries, but meanwhile preparations were made to provide a larger meeting-house. It was found that the log spring-house on Boemper's place, which had escaped destruction at the time of the raid, would, with some alterations and repairs, answer the purpose. It was accordingly taken down and brought to the village, and after the needed additional lumber had been prepared, was set up during the month of June, the dedication taking place on the 26th. The service was held by Bro. Martin Mack, who had arrived with his wife the evening before.

Previous to this a more important official visit had taken place. On the 13th of June, Bishop Spangenberg and Bro. John J. Schmick arrived, accompanied by their wives. The visit was partly one of inspection, but it was also the occasion of the first celebration of the Lord's Supper at Wechquetank. After the party had been heartily welcomed by the missionaries and the Indians, they set out to view the land, Senseman first pointing out the spot on which the "Gemeinhaus" was to be built in the course of time. They were then conducted to the ruins of Hoeth's house and mill, the scene of the massacre in 1755, and a little farther on to the place that had been selected for the graveyard. Bishop Spangenberg was pleased with this spot, and suggested that it would have been better to have built the village there than on the low ground it now occupied. They then proceeded to the Boemper place, which site pleased Spangenberg best of all. We may remark, in passing, that the Bishop's practical good sense stands out here as usual. Visitors to the site of Wechquetank cannot help wondering why one of the lowest, if not the very lowest portions of the large tract should have been taken for the settlement, when there were better sites close by. The proximity of the spring, and the fact that most of the land was already cleared may have influenced Senseman in its selection, but there was also a spring on the Boemper tract, else there would have been no spring-house there. The precise location of the latter has not been ascertained, but as it lay to the north, in which direction the land gradually rises, it must have been on higher ground.

After returning to the village, Spangenberg held the evening service, and the visitors then retired to their little tent, which had been pitched on the village square. The following day was a high day. The "Morgen Segen" was held by Bro. Schmick. Then followed the "speaking meetings," first with the brethren and then with the sisters, after which there were two lovefeasts, one for the adults and one for the children. In the public service that followed, Spangenberg delivered an edifying discourse, and then solemnly received into church fellowship the widow Emmy, who was the half-sister of Teedyuscung, and in a fervent prayer commended her to the Saviour's special care and keeping. Finally the communicants gathered around the Lord's table to celebrate His Supper. The next morning (Sunday) Schmick held the morning prayer, and then, in a meeting of all the adult members of the congregation, Spangenberg spoke very earnestly of the design of the settlement, and exhorted them to be faithful and obedient followers of the Saviour. After another special service of the married people, also held by Spangenberg, the visitors took an affectionate leave of the congregation, and set out for Nazareth.

The next official visitation at Wechquetank was in connection with the dedication of the graveyard, and the first interment made in it. As the circumstances attending this first death that occurred constitute one of the few more exciting episodes that are recorded in the diary of the missionaries, they are herewith recited in detail. The 13-year-old son of Tobias became very ill about the middle of July, 1760. Tobias seems to have been something of a black sheep, or at least a frequent wanderer from the fold, and was consequently in bad odor with the missionaries. Now that he feared his son might die, he desired that he should be baptized. As the missionaries did not think that the child's end was as near as the father apprehended, and feared that, in the event of his recovery, his father would take him away from the settlement and allow him to lapse into his own disreputable mode of life, they did not at once accede to his request, and referred the case to the authorities at Bethlehem. Meanwhile Tobias had, by the gift of a rifle, induced an Indian powwow doctor to come to Wechquetank to treat the sick boy, much to the disgust of the missionaries and of the patient himself, who begged that he might be removed to another hut where he could not be reached by the Indian doctor with his incantations. On the 21st of July, the Indian doctor, despairing of effecting a cure, and apparently conscience stricken for the fraud he had been practicing, returned Tobias' rifle, saying: "I cannot cure your son, for his heart is in the little chapel yonder, and I cannot exercise my power here. In fact, I did not come here to practice my profession, but because I wished to be near the Brethren, and if it had not been for a bit of rum that went to my head at the time I would not have undertaken the case. And now that I have been powwowing in their very presence, I am ashamed to go to the Brethren." The next day the boy grew worse, and in his delirium incessantly begged those who were about him to let him go to the children's service in the chapel and would not be convinced or consoled when assured that no service was being held. During the night, between 12 and 1 o'clock, Tobias sent a messenger to Bro. Senseman, begging forgiveness for his folly in engaging the powwow doctor, and entreating him to have pity on the child and come and baptize him. Senseman hesitated at first, having had no reply from the brethren at Bethlehem, to whom he had referred the case, but learning that the boy could not possibly recover, he decided to grant the distracted father's request. In the dead of night the communicant members of the little congregation were awakened and summoned to Tobias' house, and in their presence the sacred rite was administered. The child received the name of Tobias. He rallied somewhat after his baptism, and in faltering words spoke of the joy and peace with which the Saviour filled his heart. The father wept freely during the whole transaction. During the following days the child gradually grew weaker, until the forenoon of Saturday, the 27th, when he peacefully fell asleep while Bro. Senseman was imparting the last blessing.

And now that it became necessary to make arrangements for the first funeral at Wechquetank, the same want of practical aptitude that had been displayed in the selection of the site of the village again became apparent. It would seem a simple matter to decide how the graveyard should be laid out and to select the spot for Tobias' grave accordingly, but the missionaries did not feel equal to the task and forthwith proceeded to send an express messenger all the way to Bethlehem to Bishop Spangenberg and Bro. Schmick, nearly thirty miles distant, with a letter detailing all the circumstances of little Tobias' baptism and death, and explaining that, as there was no compass at Wechquetank, they were at a loss how to lay out the graveyard, and suggesting that Bro. Golkowsky, the noted surveyor, be dispatched at once with his instruments to mark off the ground, and some other suitable brother to preside at its dedication, and expressing the greatest concern lest, in the event of no one coming, they would have to do as best they could without any help! In response to this missive, there arrived on the following evening, not a corps of surveyors and a company of church dignitaries such as the missionaries, in their perturbed state of mind, imagined would be required for the contingency, but only one brother, Gottlieb Petzold, who, however, in his own person combined the dignities of the "Oeconomus," or Superintendent of all the Single Brethren in America, and the "locum tenens," or substitute, in various conferences, of Bishop Nathaniel Seidel, who was absent on official business in Europe.

If Petzold brought a compass with him it is not mentioned in the diary, but with or without it, he proved equal to the commission with which he had been entrusted, for on Tuesday, the 29th, he and the other brethren staked off the graveyard and determined where the grave of little Tobias should be located, which was accordingly dug at once. Towards evening the dedication and funeral took place. There was a short service in the chapel, after which the body was carried to the graveyard by four Indian brethren. Here a hymn was sung and Bro. Gottlieb delivered a short address, setting forth that as the Saviour had sanctified the whole earth by His blood, they were assembled on this spot to pray that He might bless it and consecrate it in a special manner. Then all knelt in prayer, after which the body was interred with the usual ceremonies.

There were but four deaths at Wechquetank during the existence of the mission there, viz.: that of Tobias, just mentioned; Abraham, aged 4, who died, February 28, 1762; his mother, Beata, who died a week later, and Dorothea, aged 10, who died, November 26th the same year. The remains of these four are the only remains of Indian converts that lie, awaiting the Resurrection, in the little piece of land so solemnly dedicated. The diary tells us that on every Easter morning the early services were regularly held, first in the chapel and then in the graveyard, as is done in our churches to this day. When we picture to ourselves the little procession of the brown brethren and sisters traversing the quarter mile that lay between the village and this resting place of their loved ones who had fallen asleep in Jesus, and in communion with their fellow-believers in various parts of the world, strengthening their faith and hope and joy in Him who is the Resurrection and the Life, the spot appeals to us as one that should ever be preserved and venerated.

While on the subject of the graveyard, it may be mentioned that after Wechquetank was abandoned in 1763, it continued to be used as a place of burial by the settlers in that region, among whom it was known as the "Herrnhuter" graveyard, until well into the first half of this century. Parson Decker, who lived in the neighborhood, speaks of it thus in a communication, dated March 21st, 1848, and published in "Die Biene," a bi-weekly paper issued at Bethlehem at that time: "Not far from where Hoeth's house stood lies the old graveyard, which, alas, is in the same neglected condition as that at Gnadenhuetten and many other graveyards of the Brethren. Fences are tumbling down, thorns and thistles overgrow the graves, and cattle wander about therein at will. * * * About six years ago I buried the aged widow of George Huth in the old Herrnhuter graveyard." She was the sister-in-law of that Adam Huth who lost an arm in the fight with the Indians near Hoeth's mill when Christian Boemper was killed, and who afterwards lived many years at Christianspring. This was probably the last burial made on the spot.

To return to the story of Wechquetank as a mission station. Up to the few last days of its existence as such, it contains nothing of startling or exciting interest. The first missionary in charge was Joachim Senseman; and John Joseph Shebosh, who was appointed warden, and his Indian wife, Christiana, were his principal assistants. The native helper, Anton, also held the shorter services, and even preached occasionally. Besides the regular preaching service on Sunday, morning and evening services (Morgen und Abend-Segen) were held every day in the week, together with special meetings for the adults and the children. Festival days were generally observed. When the Lord's Supper was celebrated it frequently happened that officials from Bethlehem or Nazareth came to assist the missionary in charge. During the Passion Week the "Acts of the Last Days of the Son of Man" were read every day, and, as has already been stated, the characteristic early service was held on Easter Morning. On Christmas Eve there were vigils with lovefeasts, first in the early evening, for the children, when they received tapers, and later for the adults, and on Christmas Day there was a preaching service. On New Year's Eve a lovefeast preceded the watchnight service, and on the first day of the New Year the whole congregation met in the chapel in the forenoon and evening. Even Epiphany was duly observed.

About four months after the beginning of the mission Bro. Senseman's health failed, and he was temporarily relieved by Frederic Post until, in October, 1860, Bro. Bernhard Adam Grube took his place, and the latter presided over the mission until it was abandoned three years later. Grube and his wife arrived on the 18th of October. They were both devoted to their work, and the diary constitutes a touching record of self-denying labors, attended sometimes with most discouraging experiences of obduracy, indifference and backsliding on the part of the portions of the flock, but also with many evidences of the power of the Gospel and of the divine favor and blessing attending their work.

One memorable feature of Grube's activity at Wechquetank is the translation of the "Harmony of the Four Gospels" into the Delaware Indian language, which he made while stationed there. Eight years before when, at Meniolagomeka, he was confined to his couch by a severe accident, he had begun the systematic study of the language and had by this time become so proficient that he often preached to the Indians in their own tongue, and translated the hymns they were fond of singing. He spent many weary hours and consumed much midnight oil (or, strictly speaking, venison tallow) in this work, in which he was faithfully assisted by the native helper, Anton. As portions of it were completed, the manuscript was carried by messenger to Friendensthal near Nazareth, where it was printed by Bro. Brandmueller on the press which the Brethren had set up in the second story of the mill, the proof-sheets being sent back all the way to Wechquetank for correction. It was at this time also that Grube's "Essay of a Delaware Indian Hymn Book" was printed at Friedensthal.

The occupancy of Wechquetank by the Brethren and their Indian converts was not of very long duration. They were obliged to withdraw from it by the reopening of hostilities in 1763, only three and a half years after the station was begun. The story of its final abandonment is told in detail by de Schweinitz, who appears to have had access to sources of information not available to this writer, who therefore quotes largely and almost verbatim from his account as given in "The Life and Times of David Zeisberger."

At this time the Indians both at Wechquetank and Nain were in no little danger. Exasperated by the many and cruel massacres that occurred, the inhabitants of the frontier counties breathed vengeance against the "Moravian Indians," as the converts were called, whom they accused of being in league with the savages. On the twenty-second of July the converts sent an address to the Governor, claiming his protection, which he promised them. At the same time, as they would be liable to great danger from the scouting-parties, it would be necessary for him to send out, he suggested to Squire Horsfield, that "some visible apparent badge of distinction should be agreed on, by which they might be known to be friends." In accordance with this suggestion, Horsfield drew up eight articles, describing their appearance, regulating their conduct when meeting white men, and calling both upon soldiers and civilians "not to upbraid these Indians with the acts of other Indians, not spitefully to treat them, nor to threaten to shoot them." These articles, having been approved at Nain and Wechquetank, were communicated to the Governor, and made known among the settlers.

The description of the Christian Indians was as follows: "They are always clothed. They are never painted, and wear no feathers, but hats or caps. They let their hair grow naturally. They carry their guns on their shoulders, with the shaft upwards." The rule to be observed by them when meeting a white man was this: "They will call to him, salute him, and coming near, will carry their guns either reversed or on the shoulder." "Lastly, they intend, when they go out hunting, to get a pass of Mr. Timothy Horsfield, if he be at home, or else of their ministers, Mr. John Jacob Schmick, at Nain, or Mr. Bernhard Adam Grube, at Wechquetank." That the Christian Indians meekly submitted to such restrictions, so galling to the pride of their race, is one of the many evidences of the great change wrought in them through the power of the Gospel.

For several weeks after the issuing of the articles, they remained undisturbed. But in the night of the 20th of August, an event occurred which was the beginning of their troubles. Zacharias, his wife and little child, and Zipora, all Christian Indians on their way from Wechquetank to a village on the Susquehanna named Long Island, were tranquilly sleeping in a barn on the Buchcabucka (Pohopoko) Creek, relying for protection upon Captain Jacob Wetterhold and his company, who happened to be quartered at the same place; when suddenly these very protectors, who had been drinking hard, fell upon and murdered them all, not sparing even the mother and her child, although she kneeled at their feet, in an agony, and besought them to have mercy. That this base act would excite the vengeance of Zacharias' four brothers, who lived at Wechquetank, was the prevailing opinion. Hence, the militia hastened to anticipate the expected retaliation, and three several parties appeared at Wechquetank to destroy the village. It was with the utmost difficulty, and only by appealing to the pledge of protection received from the Governor, and at last, by threatening to report Captain Wetherold to the Governor, his Commander-in-Chief, that the missionaries averted an assault.

But, although Wetterhold and his troops had nothing to fear from the Wechquetank Indians, other avengers were on their track. Early in the morning of the 8th of October, while the militia were encamped on John Stinton's farm in the Irish Settlement, the savages surprised them, killed Stinton and several of the soldiers, and mortally wounded Wetterhold, who died the next day. A storm of indignation swept over Northampton County. Many of its inhabitants, indeed, thought only of their own safety, and, excited by the most extravagant rumors, flocked to Bethlehem for protection. But a body of militia hastened to Wechquetank to massacre the whole congregation, and were prevented from carrying out their purpose only by the most earnest persuasions of Grube, who, at midnight of the day of the murder, had received an express from the Board informing him of the catastrophe, and advising immediate measures for the safety of his people. * * * Grube and his converts, accordingly, fled to Nazareth, leaving their village and stores of corn to the mercy of their enemies. At Nazareth they were cared for until early in November, when they joined the Nain Indians at Bethlehem and proceeded with them to Philadelphia, as had been decreed by the Governor and his Council. Their subsequent fortunes, from the removal to Philadelphia to their final settlement at Wyalusing, have been too often told to need repetition here.

How entirely innocent of complicity with the hostile Indians the converts at Wechquetank were, appears from the following extract from the diary of Bethlehem:

Oct. 19. (1763) "A petition to the Governor at Philadelphia was taken through here from the people living near Wechquetank, beyond the Blue Mountain, in which they very greatly deplored the removal of the Indians from Wechquetank, inasmuch as those same Indians had hitherto been their only security, they having put more reliance on them than on a few soldiers; and praying the Governor, therefore, to either have the aforesaid Indians return to their former place, if possible, or send an adequate force for their protection, (that is the protection of the settlers,) without which they could not consider themselves any longer safe at their places."

Not long after the flight of the converts, the village of Wechquetank was fired and destroyed. Remains of the village were still found as recently as fifty years ago. In Parson Decker's communication printed in "Die Biene," above alluded to, he writes: "The land on which the town stood is in the possession of William Kresge, Sr., who is now (1848) 70 years old. and who pulled down the charred logs of the church and other buildings, of which remnants are still to be found, and dug out and carted away the stones of the foundation. In ploughing the land he has also found many things that had belonged to the old Herrnhuters, such as entire stoveplates, and only this summer he unearthed a blacksmith's hammer."

The land belonging to the church was used, later on, for pasturing the cattle belonging to the farm at Christianspring, during the summer season, until about the beginning of this century, when it was cut up into farms and sold. And with it was sold the graveyard that had been set apart and solemnly conse- crated to be the resting place, until the resurrection, of the brown hearts that fell asleep in Jesus.

Which circumstance constrains the writer to make a few remarks, as it were sotto voce, and in the nature of a whispered "aside," only to this select audience. They must not be given to the world, or, if printed at all, must be preceded by the portentous words: "Als manuscript gedruckt," which means, sometimes, "Tell it not in Gath!"

The Moravian Church, and the members of the Moravian Church, are blessed or burdened, as the case may be, with reputations of various sorts and degrees, good and bad, merited and undeserved, for sundry traits, amiable and praiseworthy, or otherwise, that they are supposed to possess. Among these is the reputation for pious regard and reverent care of the spots solemnly set apart and dedicated as the resting place of their dead. This characteristic Moravian trait has been celebrated in song and story, varying considerably, it may be added, in the matter of truthfulness and of literary excellence. It is no more than right that we should occasionally take time to bask in the sunshine of such praise and adulation, and complacently contemplete some of the facts upon which they are based.

On the south side of the Lehigh at Bethlehem, not far from the old bridge, there lies such a consecrated spot. When it was no longer needed for burial purposes, it was made picturesque by a rich growth of briars and brambles, and a romantic interest was added to it by carefully allowing all boundary marks to decay or be removed so that in the course of time its precise location became unknown. Then the Philistines invaded that region, clad in the invulnerable armor of Progress, and with their irresistable weapons of gold and silver and paper currency, they wrested it from the pious keeping of the spiritual brethren and descendants of those that lie there awaiting the Resurrection. Forced thus to yield it into the hands of the invading stranger, it was not, however, abandoned to utter forgetfulness and neglect. For many years two venerable Vice-Presidents of the Moravian Historical Society have held the commission to sacredly guard the place, and there is hardly a day in the year but what they may be found on their respective perches in apartments nearby, and, for all we know, over the very site, diligently engaged in this pious occupation, while they incidentally attend to such other avocations as the manufacture and sale, to the nations of the world, of 18-inch guns and impenetrable armor plates.

A little more than a mile to the west of the place where we are assembled, rest the mortal remains of all the brethren, sisters and children, 66 in number, who died in the various settlements on the Barony of Nazareth between the years 1743 and 1756. It lies on the highest point in the Barony, ascertained to be such, tradition says, by Captain Garrison, who came up from Bethlehem with his surveying instruments to mark it off. It is consecrated ground in a double sense, being dedicated with solemn services when the first interment was made, and then by the successive pilgrimages made from Friedensthal, The Rose, Ephrata, Old Nazareth, Gnadenthal and Christianspring, as one after another of the pioneers departed this life. When, in 1756, it was abandoned and the present cemetery of Nazareth was laid out, it remained in the possession of the Brethren for many years, and tender provision was made to prevent its desecration by the plough and harrow of the husbandman. The soil in that locality abounds in fragments of quartz, and as these were turned up by the ploughshare in the adjoining fields, they were carefully gathered together, carted to the old cemetery and dumped over the graves, thus, in the course of time, not only forming a memorial mound, but also a harbor for snakes and hornets and yellow-jackets, which effectually kept away profane and idle intruders. Later on, this consecrated resting place of 66 Moravian brethren and sisters and children was likewise captured by the stranger, and when he threatened to remove the memorial mound of quartz and till the ground so that his children and dependents might have corn and rye and buckwheat to eat and be filled, then the Moravian Historical Society put forth its strength in the shape of paper currency, (for this was in the days after the war and before the resumption of specie payments) and took possession of the land to have and to hold it forever.

The history of the graveyard at Wechquetank is similar in almost every particular, except that it is not, as yet, complete; and other instances might be adduced to show how well we Moravians have lived up to our reputation for pious regard and tender care of what one sweet singer has styled our "fair cities of the dead!"

Here endeth the "aside." May it serve to stir us up to renewed activity in the way of rescuing from oblivion the scenes of our spiritual forefathers' labors, and to continue the good work that has resulted thus far in the erection of permanent memorials at Shecomeko, in New York, at Wechquadnach, in Connecticut, at Wyalusing and Nazareth, in Pennsylvania, and at Goshen, in Ohio, and in preparations for similar memorials at Meniolagomeka and Wechquetank in the near future.

After the sale of the land at Wechquetank, the locality seems to have been seldom visited by Moravians, and except to a few historic delvers, its history was unknown. There is a record in the "Bicne" of a visit made to the neighborhood more than 50 years ago by Dr. (Abraham) Huebener and Squire (Jacob) Wolle, of Bethlehem, during which they killed trout with a bow and arrow in some large ponds to the east of Wechquetank, but the nature of their business there is not mentioned. Some years later Dr. Huebener moved to Effort, situated two miles to the north, and lived there awhile, and about the same time his brother, Heinrich Huebener, who had also moved thither from Bethlehem, engaged in independent home missionary work in that region. It was probably through Dr. Huebener that de Schweinitz and Reichel obtained what information is given in their writings concerning the site of Wechquetank. Marianne Hoeth's narrative, a translation of which was communicated to the Society in a paper read at the annual meeting in 1897, led to inquiries and investigations as to the scene of her story, which resulted in the re-discovery of its precise location, and of the fact, then not generally known, that it was also the site of Wechquetank, and the probable site of Captain Harris' village, where Zinzendorf and his party encamped in 1742.

A year ago, action was taken by our Association to mark the sites both of Wechquetank, and of Meniolagomeka, 5 miles to the south of it. A committee, consisting of the Brethren Frank Kunkel, Abraham S. Schropp, Joseph A. Rice, Eugene Leibert, and G. A. Schneebeli, was oppointed to carry out the project, and a report of what has thus far been accomplished by the same is herewith appended.

The sites of both stations were visited in October last. At Meniolagomeka the owner of the land at once agreed to convey to the Society a suitable lot for the erection of a monument on the site of the village. It adjoins the highway leading from Smith's Gap to Kunkletown. The location of the graveyard could only be fixed approximately. Since then a deed in fee simple has been executed for the lot, of which the Society is now the legal owner.

At Wechquetank, the site of the graveyard was first visited. It was pointed out as such by one of the oldest inhabitants, and the location agreed precisely with recorded descriptions of it, and a few minutes' search brought to light fragments of ancient gravestones. It lies on the east bank of the stream, a few yards north of where it empties into the mill-pond. Until quite recently the condition of the spot had remained as described by Parson Decker. Now, however, the briars and brambles have been cleared away, and it is being cultivated along with the rest of the field in which it is situated, and except for the fragments of dressed stones that are occasionally turned up, there is nothing to indicate that it was once a cemetery. On the site of the village, a quarter of a mile to the south, the only vestiges found were the spring and the decayed roots of some of the apple trees that had been planted by the missionaries.

On the occasion of this first visit, the proposition of the Society to mark the spot by the erection of a monument was received by denizens of the place in such a way as to convey the impression that a few perches of land could easily be secured for the purpose, and the committee wended its way homeward with the comfortable feeling that the object of this pilgrimage was in a fair way of accomplishment. In the beginning of November a circular was issued soliciting contribution for the proposed memorial stones, to which gratifying responses have been received, and the Society for Propogating the Gospel among the heathen has kindly appropriated one hundred dollars to add to the amount thus raised; and it is hoped that, ere long, satisfactory arrangements may be made for the erection of the Meniolagomeka monument, and for its dedication with appropriate ceremonies in the spring or early summer of next year.

At Wechquetank, however, the prospect for the immediate accomplishment of our project is not so promising, for on a second visit to this place last fall to negotiate for the purchase of a site for the proposed monument, it was found that a remarkable and unaccountable change had taken place in the attitude of the owners of the land, which, a few weeks before, it had been intimated might be had for the asking, but was now held at the rate of many thousand dollars per acre! This startling rise was recognized as prohibitory by the committee. It staggered even those of its members who reside at Nazareth, where, as is well known by all readers of the newspapers published in the Lehigh Valley, we have become so accustomed to the booming of real estate that the increase over night of several hundred per cent. in the value of a town lot is a mere bagatelle!

It is perhaps not judicious to say more on this point than that the committee has deemed it prudent to drop negotiations for the present, and to leave Wechquetank severely alone for a while. They do not at all entertain the idea that the difficulties which have arisen will be permanent, but feel assured that before very long they will disappear, and that the project of the Society will be welcomed and aided where it is now opposed.

To gain this end, however, it may be necessary (and this statement is again added in the way of a confidential "aside" to this select audience, which is requested to let it go no further, lest it reach the ears of any who may be concerned, whether living or dead) so far as the Wechquetank project is concerned, to entirely reconstruct the committee that has it in charge. Various theories have been suggested to explain the obstacles it has encountered in its negotiations at Wechquetank, all more or less unsatisfactory, until a very simple solution of the mystery gradually unfolded itself through increased familiarity with the facts recited in this narrative, and mainly those relating to old Captain Harris and his boys. The selection of the committee a year ago was innocently made, and yet, if the express purpose of its appointment had been to wound the feelings of the old man, and particularly of his illustrious sons, Teedyuscung and Captain John, it could not have been more appropriately constituted. A glance at its make-up, on the light of what has been recorded in this history, will show that the incursion of such a company, representing such an association as the Moravian Historical Society, was enough to make old Captain Harris turn in his grave, and to summon his spirit and the spirits of his progeny to haunt the locality, and cast such an evil spell over it as to thwart their every undertaking!

Prominent in the committee, both as to activity and stature, (for he towers head and shoulders above the rest) is the man who in his own person stands pre-eminent as the representative of all the hated race who now occupy the possessions and the hunting grounds of Captain Harris and his heirs. He is either descended from, or closely related to, every man, woman and child that inhabit the region on both sides of the Blue Mountain included in the famous walking purchase. If you traverse it in his company, you cannot pass a house or a barn or a village, but what he tells you was built or settled by a grandfather or greatgrandfather, or uncle or great-uncle. He salutes all passers by familiarly, while he explains to you the various degrees of consanguinity by which he is respectively connected with them all!

Moreover, his name in destined to live forever in that region, for only a little south of where Harris dwelt, who has long since been forgotten thereabouts, lies the village of Kunkletown, so called in order to perpetuate the name of his family. Furthermore, it is this man who, for several decades, has practically run the Moravian Historical Society—that obnoxious organization which has unearthed so much that is fatal to the good name of the Harris tribe!

Another member of the committee is a lineal descendant of that Matthew Schropp who, in the early part of 1760, came up from Bethlehem with George Klein, tramping around the Wechquetank lands, and setting up his instruments of brass, and his painted wooden staves, and stretching his chains of iron, preliminary to another transfer by which the alienation of the ground from its rightful owners was to be advanced one step farther. He, too, is an enthusiastic member of the Moravian Historical Society, and one of the strongest backers of every enterprise similar to the one with which it is now engaged.

The presence of the third and fourth members of the committee must be specially obnoxious and insulting to Teedyuscung, who would, if he could, resent their very existence as entirely illogical, for they are the great-great-grandsons of that Nitschmann who was the first to fall when his dauntless warriors massacred the helpless inmates of the Gnadenhuetten mission-house, and fancied that by this act their very names and memories would be blotted out, little dreaming that Nitschmann had a boy then safe at school at Nazareth Hall, who would leave a numerous progeny to boast of their martyr ancestry. Instead of never having been born, as Teedyuscung intended, one of these spends his Summer leisure near the site of his ancestor's murder, making frequent excursions up the Long Valley, and tramping over Captain Harris's land, and perhaps over his very grave, with perfect impunity, while the other writes flippantly of the whole Harris family and their grievances, and does not hesitate to call its first-born a scoundrel.

But of all the members of this unfortunately constituted committee, there is none who could be regarded with such indignant aversion, especially by Captain John, as the fifth. Having come from beyond the sea in early childhood, his ancestry never collided with the Harrises of Wechquetank. He has, however, come into the possession of the land where Captain John's village stood 160 years ago, which the Captain called Welagameka, but is now known as the intersection of Whitefield and Belvidere Streets. And on this land he has erected mills wherein he manufactures garments, the use of which would have sorely perplexed the squaws and pappooses that once dwelt there. And furthermore, he has not only sinned against good taste, but has shown a contemptuous disregard of the memory of the rightful owners of the soil by giving to his mills the prosaic name of "The Nazareth Manufacturing Company" and putting their product on the market as "Nazareth Waists," instead of using the more poetic and euphonious title of "Welagameka Mills" and "Welagameka Underwear." All that he has ever done to remind the passer-by of the red men's former occupancy of the place has been to erect three statues (made in Germany) on his lawn, fairly well representing the aborigines as to the color of their skin, but entirely inaccurate as to their attire, which he has made to resemble that of the brownies and goblins that inhabit the mountains and caves and forest recesses of his native land.

It is not surprising then, that this committee should have been hampered and opposed in their undertaking when they ventured near the precincts of Captain Harris' village. Perhaps less drastic measures than its dissolution may serve to withstand or allay the restless spirits and their malign influence. The Executive Committee of the society will look into the matter, and will doubtless be able to report, in good time, that all difficulties have been overcome and that measures for the erection of the Wechquetank monument are fairly under way.

Here endeth the second "aside," and with it end the Chronicles of Wechquetank from the earliest times up to the last great conclave of the Moravian Historical Society held in the nineteenth century.

Extracts from the Diary of Nazareth Relating to the Indian Converts from Wechquetank, 1763.

Wednesday, Oct. 12.—In the forenoon Bro. Grube arrived, in advance of his Indians, with whom he had camped over night near Diezens, and we immediately conferred with him regarding their accommodation. He assured us that it was the highest time that they had left Wechquetank, as they were no longer safe there, either from the savages or the whites. Towards noon the Indians came, accompanied by our wagons, which conveyed their effects. They were obliged to leave much of their corn, cattle and implements. The Grubes and their dear, brown flock were lodged in the Widows' House,—the old mothers having vacated the same, day before yesterday, and moved into the Nursery. The single sisters also moved into the Nursery for the sake of greater security.

Monday, Oct. 17.—Early this morning three wagons went to Wechquetank, to fetch the corn and other effects of the Indians, and returned the next day, but were obliged to leave much behind, especially as intelligence was received that the New Englanders, who lived in Wajomick, had nearly all been murdered by the Indians.

Monday, Oct. 24.—Our Indians built themselves a hut behind the former Widows' House, to be occupied by a couple of families.

Saturday, Oct. 29.—The little Indian congregation had a very blessed celebration of the Lord's Supper.

Monday, Oct. 31.—The Brethren, as well as the strangers (fugitives), were busy replacing the palisades.

Monday, Nov. 7.—Yesterday our Indian converts learned that, by order of the government, they were to move to Philadelphia, and today the Sheriff came, with Bro. Horsfield, and brought the order to prepare to set out tomorrow. He also took from them their rifles and tomahawks, to all of which they submitted so peacefully and cheerfully as to excite our admiration, and by their behavior they commended themselves anew to the fraternal regard of the brethren.

Tuesday, Nov. 8.—In the forenoon our Indian brethren and sisters (Geschwister) accompanied by Brother and Sister Grube, departed with bag and baggage (Sack und Pack) and the white brethren, who, on account of their good behavior and watchfulness, saw them depart with great regret, accompanied them with their blessing.

The Moravian Graveyards at Nazareth, Pa., 1744-1904.

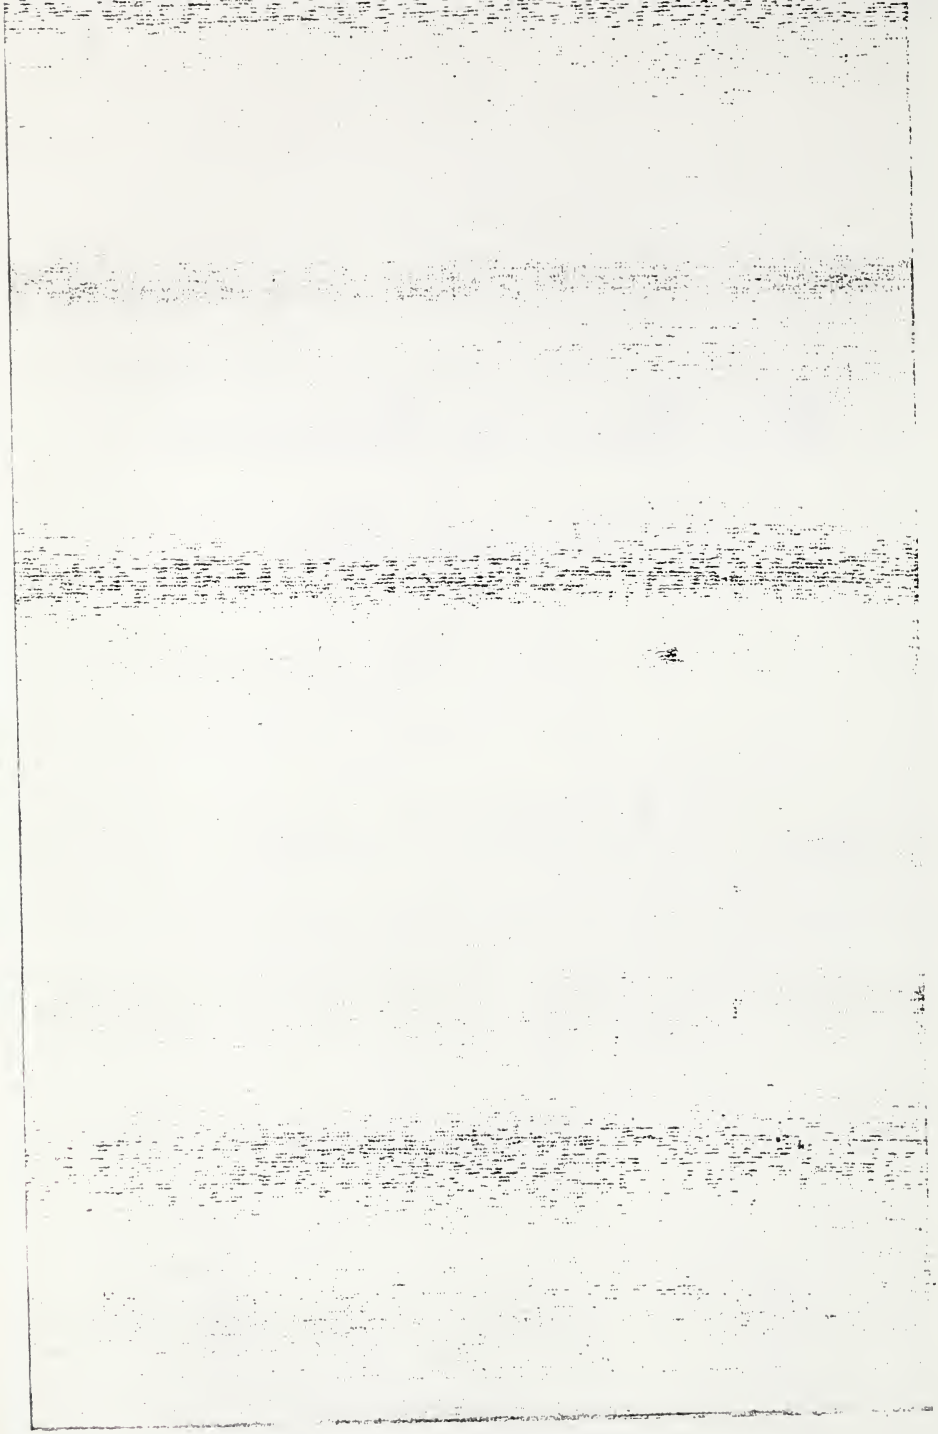
BY THE REV. EDW. T. KLUGE.



The Moravian Graveyards at Nazareth.

Comparatively few, who visit the graveyards of the Moravian Church at Nazareth, are aware, that in these beautifully located God's Acres many brethren and sisters have been laid to rest, who were prominent in the early history of the Church, whilst there are numbers of others, who, though never occupying positions entitling their names to be inscribed upon the annals of the Church, yet performed an important part in those first trying years of the Brethren's settlements in Pennsylvania. The names of many have been forgotten; the little stones, which marked their last resting place, have crumbled into dust; but in God's book of remembrance are treasured up their humble services, the sacrifices so willingly offered, the hardships endured, and, above all, the sterling Christian character of those first settlers, who labored, suffered and bore the heat and burden of those early days, not with any selfish object in view, not with the hope of accumulating wealth, or even a home of their own, but only to perform their part in establishing the Church in the wilds of the new world, and for the glory of God and the spread of His gospel of grace.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT OF DEATHS.

While in many churches the death of a member is made known by tolling of the church-bell, (the number of strokes of the bell indicating the number of years of the departed,) the old Moravian custom of making the announcement is by means of the solemn strains of the trombones from the steeple of the church. Formerly everyone was familiar both with the hymns and the melodies or tunes of the Church, and, as many of the latter were associated with a well-known hymn, there was no difficulty experienced in recognizing the significance of an announcement from the steeple of the church. This being no longer the case, the beauty and impressiveness of this custom, as well as the significance of the tunes by the trombonists in the early hours of a festival day, have, in a great measure, been lost. Believing that a list of the tunes used for the announcement of deaths may be appreciated by many, we here append the same. The first tune is 151A, which is to remind us of an old German hymn, which announces, in beautiful language, that a fellow-pilgrim has been called home: "Es schied aus unserm Bunde, Ein Pilgrim uns voran," etc. The second one indicates from which division or class of the congregation a soul has departed:

For Married Men, Tune 83. "Jesus ne'er forsaketh me, This my spirit greatly cheereth; And my constant trust shall be; Yea, though death at length appeareth; Herein precious comfort lies; I shall in His image rise."

For Married Women, Tune 79. "His plea amid deep sighing, With bitter tears and crying, My soul with peace doth bless," etc.

For Widowers, Tune 132A. "Therefore my hope is in His grace, And not in my own merit; On Him my confidence I place," etc.

For Widows, Tune 149. "Oh, what happiness divine, Oh, the lot most precious," etc.

For Unmarried Men, Tune 185. "Faithful Lord, my only joy and treasure," etc.

For Unmarried Women, Tune 37. "My happy lot is here the Lamb to follow," etc.

For Older Boys, Tune 23. "With new grace, dear Lord, array me," etc.

For Older Girls, Tune 14A. "Oh, that I may so favored be With them above to join;" etc.

For Little Boys, Tune 39. "We thank Thee, that Thou wilt the children permit," etc.

For Little Girls, Tune 82. "Should not I for gladness leap, Led by Jesus as His sheep," etc.

The third tune is the same as the first one, viz. 151A, the hymn associated with this melody being a prayer, in view of our own departure: viz., "Be near me when I'm dying, Oh, show Thy cross to me!" etc.

The plaintive tones of these sweet melodies have touched hearts, spoken to souls, breathed comfort, peace, hope into many an one, and raised thoughts far above earth to heaven and the coming glory. On the occasion of a funeral, the tune, indicating the division of the congregation from which the departed has been called home, is generally performed on entering the graveyard.

The Moravians regarded the congregation as a large family; all were brethren and sisters; and this idea was not disregarded when the departed were laid to rest on their God's Acres. No distinction is made between the wealthy and the poor, the learned and illiterate, the honored and the humblest of God's children. The brethren are interred in one plot, the sisters in another; the children in a space allotted to them, etc. A simple slab of marble marks their resting places. There is a deep significance in the customs of our forefathers, though not always appreciated by all.

THE FIRST GRAVEYARD.

The first graveyard of the Nazareth settlement was consecrated on the occasion of the burial of George Kremser, on Jan. 18, 1744. The service was a brief one, on that cold winter's day, and amid the dangers which often threatened the Brethren on funeral occasions; for we are told, that it was frequently deemed prudent for some of the Brethren to be armed, on account of possible attacks from hostile Indians.

This graveyard is located on the highest point in this section of the country, and was selected by Captain N. Garrison, the well-known sea-captain and surveyor, not only on account of the fact just stated, but probably also as being convenient for the settlements of Gnadenthal, Christian's Spring, Old Nazareth, Friedensthal and the "Rose."

It is difficult to account for the strange misnomer, "the Indian Graveyard," which, in modern times, has been given to this spot. Only four Indians are buried here, viz.: Salome, an Indian woman; Maria Spangenberg, the daughter of Ruth, an Indian from Shekomeko, who was baptized at Bethlehem, May 13, 1746; Sarah, daughter of the Indian Nathaniel, a child from the school, baptized by Brother Christian Henry Rauch, and Beata, daughter of the Indian Philip, who died five days after her baptism.

The designations given by the Brethren to this graveyard were Ruheberg (the hill of rest), Hutberg, after the graveyard at Herrnhut, and the more common name, Gottesacker, or God's Acre.

The first graveyard at Nazareth is beautifully located, the landscape from this elevation being most picturesque, the Blue Mountains, like a mighty wall, limiting the view to the north, while to the south and east is spread out the country lying between Nazareth and Bethlehem, little villages and hamlets dotting the landscape, with the South Mountain in the background.

It was a matter of deep regret that this beautiful and sacred spot passed out of the possession of the Church at the time when the extensive farms and woodland belonging to and constituting Gnadenthal, were sold to the County for the establishment of the Almshouse, and Christian's Spring and land, lying between that quaint little hamlet and Nazareth, to private individuals. This occurred about sixty years ago, the Brethren at Nazareth being filled with indignation and vainly protesting. The graveyard was included in the sale, the only condition being that the ground of this little plot should not be tilled. At that time the mounds of the graves were in a tolerable condition, covered with thyme and the beautiful mountain-pink, and the larger portion of the modest little tombstones were still in position and legible. The owner of the property, faithful to the conditions made in the deed, did not plough nor sow the graveyard, but, if possible, consigned the sacred spot to a more ignoble use, making it the dumping-place for the large quantity of quartz stones and rubbish gathered from his land. Nazareth appears to have been powerless to prevent the desecration of this first God's Acre.

Finally, after many years and great difficulties, the plot was secured by the joint action of the Moravian Historical Society (soon after its organization), and the Board of Trustees of the church at Nazareth. It was purchased from Mr. Abraham Gruver, who had become the owner, for the sum of $150—a very large sum for so small a piece of ground in those days; and from Mr. Edwin P. Wolle and others a strip of land for an approach to the graveyard, at the rate of $125 an acre. The Trustees of Nazareth church hold the deed, the Historical Society having later received a perpetual lease.

It was no trifling undertaking to reclaim and restore this waste place to a condition worthy of the object for which it had been dedicated in 1744, as the Historical Society at that time had only a small membership and was almost without means. The ground was cleared, the few remnants of tombstones removed to the museum of the Society, and a monument, prepared by Mr. Robert Haas of Nazareth, was erected, while Mr. John Jordan had a small pavilion (a reminder of the one on the Hutberg at Herrnhut), built at his own expense, the property being enclosed by a fence and some trees planted on the graveyard and the walk to this sacred spot.

On the 12th of June, 1867, the formal unveiling of the monument and the re-dedication of the graveyard took place. A large number of members and friends of the Church from Bethlehem, Philadelphia, NewYork, Brooklyn, Lititz, Schoeneck and Nazareth had assembled. The trombonists from Schoeneck and Nazareth furnished music, alternating with one another, as the large procession wended its way up the hills to the graveyard. The Nazareth church choir attended in a body, and in addition to leading the singing of hymns by the congregation, sang a pretty anthem, composed for the occasion by Brother Benjamin Clewell, the organist of the church at Nazareth. The burial litany was prayed by the Rev. Robert de Schweinitz, Principal of Nazareth Hall, and two addresses were made, the one by the Rev. Edward Rondthaler, pastor of the church in Brooklyn, and the other by the Rev. E. T. Kluge, pastor of the church at Nazareth. Bishop J. C. Jacobson, President of the Provincial Elders' Conference, pronounced the benediction.

On the monument are inscribed the names of those interred in this graveyard. The monument is made of American marble, the total cost being $448.30. Sixty-seven persons are here interred, viz., fifty-two children, eleven white adults, and four Indians, two of whom are children.

As this graveyard was in use upwards of twelve years, the number of adult members buried here is small, especially if the fact is borne in mind, that those first settlers were subjected to many hardships and discomforts, and that, during these years, contagious diseases—amongst the rest, the small-pox—prevailed. The large number of little children who died, is easily accounted for. By far the larger number had lived in the nursery at Ephrata; for, on account of the peculiar conditions existing at that time, parents were obliged to place their little children in the nursery, so that they might receive the care and attention, which it was impossible for them to bestow, as the large majority in Bethlehem, Nazareth, and other settlements were occupied in felling the forests, preparing the land for tillage, and carrying on the various pursuits begun in the colonies, the women also being occupied in many ways. Besides, the homes prepared for the large numbers, who were constantly coming here from Europe and England, as well as from various sections of this country, were insufficient for their proper accommodation.

Of the names of families represented among those interred in this first graveyard, very few are now to be found in the Church. The names which occur, which are familiar, are the following: Samuel Krause, Andrew Kremser, Jacob Till, Clewell, Demuth, Christ, together with Michler, descendants still living in Easton, Büninger, (later spelled Bininger,) descendants having formerly been prominent members of the Church in New York, and some still living in that city; Mücke, descendants living in Lititz, Pa.

Of the adult members buried here, there are several, who deserve particular notice:

Christoph Demuth, a manufacturer of paper-boxes, came from Moravia. In 1726, being greatly troubled in spirit and longing for peace, he forsook his home, and by a wonderful leading of Providence, came to Herrnhut. Apparently he had not decided where to go, nor had he heard anything of Count Zinzendorf, nor of the refuge there offered by him for refugees from Moravia. A few weeks later he returned to Moravia for his wife and two children. Brother Demuth was present at the communion at Berthelsdorf, on August 13, 1727, and was a participant. In 1726, in company with Christian David, he went to Moravia, remaining there six months; and, although in danger of imprisonment, visited devout souls in various places, who, in their concealment, were longing for freedom to worship the Lord according to the dictates of their consciences and to enjoy the spiritual blessings which their fathers of the Brethren's Church had so highly prized. Living in Herrnhut, and supporting himself by the labor of his hands, he made many journeys in the cause of the Lord. Amongst the rest, he went to Berlin in 1729, to various portions of Prussia in 1732, in company with Fredefick Boehnisch, to Würtemberg in 1730, in order to accompany two young women from Switzerland to Herrnhut.

In 1743, together with 120 others, he and his family came to Pennsylvania, later serving in Mülhbach, Germantown, and Fredericktown as minister. He was an excellent singer, and when preaching to the people, he often proclaimed the gospel in song, which was very edifying and impressive, as was also his devout walk ("priesterlicher Wandel"). During the greater part of the time, Nazareth was his home, where "his example of holy living was not without blessed fruits." On the last day of his life, though with a feeble voice, he frequently repeated his favorite hymn, "Jesu Kreuze, Jesu Todesstunden, Jesu, über alles schöne Wunden, Jesu, Gottes-Leichelein, Soll mein Ein und Alles sein." Two of his children survived him: Ferdinand, and a daughter, married to Peter Thiel. His age was 64 years, 3 months and 20 days.

Johannes Muenster, one of the first exiles from Moravia and members of the Herrnhut congregation. He was born in Zauchtenthal in 1700. In the great awakening in Moravia, he was deeply impressed, and, in consequence, came to Herrnhut in 1725. He too was a participant in the memorable communion on August 13th, 1727. In the service of the congregation, he was commissioned to make visits to various parts of the country, in one of which he became acquainted with the Dober family, which figures so prominently in early Moravian history. Twice he went to Moravia, the last time bringing with him his mother and three of his brothers and sisters. He was married to a daughter of Brother Nitschmann. In 1742, during the war between Prussia and Austria, he was twice sent, with his wife, to Silesia, where they labored with blessing among awakened souls in that country. He and his family came to Pennsylvania with the "Second Sea Congregation," among the so-called "Fischer Gesellschaft." In this country he served in various capacities, in Oley, Skippack, Muddy Creek, Macungie, Bethlehem, Friedensthal and Nazareth.

Others, deserving special mention, are the following:

Elizabeth Till, m.n. Stephan, wife of Jacob Till, was born in Switzerland. At her urgent request, her father took her to Herrnhaag, when quite young, as she "longed to be the Lord's property and to serve Him." This she did in Gnadeck, Herrnhut, Marienborn, Zeist, Herrndyk, generally in Children's Homes. Together with a large company, she came to this country in 1753, on the ship Irene, and here rendered valuable services.

ELIZABETH PAYNE, mother of the Rev. Jasper Payne, a minister of the church. She was born in England in 1669. Through her son she became acquainted with the Brethren and united with the Church. In 1743, although in her 74th year, she came to this country, with her son and 120 others, in the vessel Little Strength. On the voyage she was of much service to the English Brethren and Sisters of the company; and during her stay in Bethlehem, was very helpful to missionaries and others. When no longer able to serve others, on account of her age and infirmities, she prayed for them. She died in Nazareth in the 87th year of her life, her death being the first which occurred in the Widows' House.

ANNA MARGARETHA NILSON, m.n. Henckel ,was another valued woman, who came to this country, as a member of one of the "sea-congregations."

Two others, CATHARINE HILLMAN, m. n. Kaiser, and ARIANCHY COUNTRYMAN, her sister, the wife of Henry Countryman, both from England, should also be mentioned. They became acquainted with Brother Burnside, while on their way to Virginia, and were so deeply impressed by the preaching of the Brethren, that they decided to abandon the idea of moving to Virginia and remained in Dansbury (in what is now Monroe County), in order to be under the spiritual care of the Moravian Brethren. The Indians having threatened the place, all fled, taking refuge in Nazareth. Here, after a stay of only a few weeks, both died on the same day, probably from the effects of their flight.

JOHANN BAUMAN, a married man, whose father was a Mennonite in Conestoga, is also buried here. He had been baptized by the Mennonites; but, having been deeply impressed by the teaching of the Brethren, his father bought land, about five miles from Gnadenthal, upon which the young man and his wife were to live so that they might be near the Brethren, "because his son loved them so dearly." Young Bauman was shot and scalped by the Indians. His father brought the remains to Gnadenthal, with the request that his son might be laid to rest with those whom he loved and who had been so great a blessing to him.

Although the number of persons interred on the first graveyard is very small, only 67, of whom 52 are children, 11 white adults, and 4 Indians, two of whom were children,—the spot is worthy of being held sacred; the few to whom reference has been made being pious men and women, who contributed, in no small degree, to the work of the Church, and whose lives preached eloquently to many, both in Europe and this country, of the love and grace of the Saviour; men who belonged to the number who forsook home and kindred for the sake of the gospel, and who link us to the Ancient Church of the Brethren. The few Indians, first fruits of missionary labor in this part of the country, and the large number of little children, whose early death speak loudly of the privations and sacrifices made by the first Christian settlers of this portion of Pennsylvania; they also add to the sacredness of this spot. Surely it is Holy Ground; the "Ruheberg," the resting place of many wearied followers of the Saviour.

May 8. Abraham Clewell, infant son of George Clewell, Plainfield.

THE SECOND GRAVEYARD.

The second graveyard, now in use, was opened on the 14th of February, 1756, on the occasion of the funeral of John Peter Lehnert or Lennert, "das erste Waizenkorn auf diesem Gottesacker." Bishop Spangenberg held the funeral and consecrated the ground, delivering a brief address on the words, "But I am a worm, and no man." Psalm 22 : 6.

A beautiful location had again been selected on the hill overlooking a wide expanse of country, bounded by mountains. During many years every effort to improve and beautify this spot proved fruitless. It appeared to be a rather barren spot. Two lone linden trees, which never attained any considerable size were the only ones in the enclosure at the gateway, while the graves were covered with the aromatic thyme and mountain pinks, the only plants which appeared to thrive. At the entrance on the east side, there was a neat gateway, with an arch, containing two inscriptions; the one on the east side, a German one, "Ich lebe, und Ihr sollt auch leben;" on the west side, an English one, "The body rests in hope."

About sixty years ago, efforts were made by the late Brethren John Beitel, Sr., Christian Brunner and others to plant trees. Having repeatedly failed, they finally conveyed to the spot large trees in the depth of winter, carefully dug up with an abundance of frozen soil, hoping thus to succeed; but in vain; and after many disappointments and most persevering labor, extending over many years, the plan was abandoned; for nothing would grow on this place of the dead! Later, about forty-five or more years ago, another effort was made by the late Brethren Edmund Ricksecker, Dr. Charles Sellers, William Christ and others; and this met with success. A large variety of trees, especially evergreens, were successfully planted; and it is maintained by those capable of judging correctly, that the collection of evergreens was the largest and most complete in any portion of the State, many being extremely rare. Since then many changes have taken place, and the axe has been freely used. No doubt, much of this was necessary; but, in all probability, the large variety of interesting deciduous and evergreen trees was not known to those who wielded the axe, nor the labors and troubles of the good men, who now sleep their last sleep in this sacred spot, which they had endeavored to beautify.

In this graveyard are interred the remains of upwards of forty-five ministers, missionaries and wives of ministers, some of whom had held prominent positions in the Church and rendered valuable services. A number of former Nazareth pastors rest here with the members of their flock; amongst these Franz Christian Lembke, who served as pastor in Nazareth nearly thirty years, and also, for some years as principal of Nazareth Hall and a member of the Provincial Board. Amongst other prominent people buried here, are a number, who were born in Zauchtenthal and other places in Moravia and Bohemia, some of whom had belonged to the company of exiles from the original home of the Brethren's Church and first members of the Renewed Church, and had participated in the ever memorable communion at Berthelsdorf, August 13th, 1727; also many of the ancestors of the Moravians of the present day; noted physicians, such as Dr. John Frederick Otto, Joseph Otto, Stephen Bruce, Henry Schmidt, besides highly gifted and respected physicians of later times. Besides, there are a number of negroes, for many years slaves, who had been captured in Guinea and brought to this country; and also refugees from Wyoming and other places, Nazareth being a haven of rest and safety to a large number.

The total number here interred is 1134.

In the following list of burials in the second, or present, graveyard, the names are printed and numbered in the order of interment. The characters following each name indicate the location of the grave, and these are followed by the date of decease. The rows of graves are indicated by Roman numerals counting from the East, those to the North of the middle path being designated by the letter n, and those to the South by the letter s. The Arabic numerals denote the number of each grave counting from the middle walk, thus:

1. John Peter Lehnert. ix, s. 1. Feb. 14, 1756, signifies that the first interment was that of John Peter Lehnert who was buried in the ninth row, and the first grave south of the middle walk, and that his death occurred on the 14th of February, 1756.

128. Joseph. viii, s. 13. Sept. 29. A negro, born in 1715. When twelve years old he was brought from Guinea to Charleston, S.C., and sold as a slave. Was taken to England in 1727, by the captain of a vessel because he was "a very fine looking negro." In 1732 came to Montserrat, West Indies, and a year later, with ten other slaves, to Durham Furnace, Pennsylvania. His master having moved on a farm about two miles from Bethlehem, Joseph met the Brethren, and from Brother Froehlich heard of Christ the first time, and then desired to be saved. He married a negro woman belonging to the Ysselsteyn family, who lived at Bethlehem; but he was obliged to remain at a furnace in New Jersey. Later was taken to Maryland for two years. His master, having come to Bethlehem and seen Joseph's wife and little son, permitted him to return to the furnace, so that he might be nearer his family. Occasionally he came to Bethlehem, and was impressed by what he there heard. His wife had been baptized. In May, 1752, Joseph was baptized by Bishop Spangenberg in Bethlehem. He longed for liberty and to be able to live in Bethlehem, the Brethren collected £50 and secured his freedom. He lived in Bethlehem for some time; then 12½ years at Gnadenthal, and 10 at Christianspring. Of his seven children, two daughters survived their father.

The Secretary reported that a granite block, three feet long and one foot square, bearing the inscription "Site of the Rose Inn, 1752," had been placed on the farm of Mr. John Reinheimer, near Nazareth, on May 8, 1903, by the Brethren S. R. Odenwelder and Frank Kunkel, in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the Executive Board on October 13, 1902.

It was further reported that a contract had been entered into for a hard-wood fence around the Old Graveyard, at an estimated cost of $150.00.

On October 20, 1902, a special meeting of the Executive Board was held at the home of Brother Eugene Leibert, for the purpose of taking action upon a bequest of two thousand dollars ($2,000.00), made by the late Mrs. Jane Jordan, of Philadelphia, to the Society. As the bequest was made in memory of the late Miss Helen Bell, it was decided to keep the sum intact for the time being, and to name it "The Helen Bell Memorial Fund."

At the regular meeting of the Executive Board, held July 13, 1903, the sum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars ($175.00) was placed to the credit of the Publication Committee for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1903. The sum available by the Committee amounts to $235.79.

No reports of the several monuments and memorials had been received, except one concerning the Zeisberger Memorial in the Goshen, Ohio, Graveyard, which was stated to be in need of attention.

On motion of Brother Eugene Leibert, Brother C. A. Haehnle was nominated to fill the vacancy in the Publication Committee, created by the election of Brother J. T. Hamilton into the Mission Board of the Unity. On motion of Brother Robert Rau, all the former officers were re-nominated, together with Brother Haehnle, and Brother C. W. Krause was authorized to cast the ballot for their election. The officers, therefore, are the following:

President, Bishop J. M. Levering.

Vice-Presidents, Bishop Henry J. Van Vleck, the Rev. Eugene Leibert, the Rev. Edward T. Kluge, the Rev. Wm. H. Rice, the Rev. M. W. Leibert, the Rev. A. D. Thaeler, Wm. H. Jordan, Abraham R. Beck, Abraham S. Schropp, C. Otto Brunner.

Secretary and Treasurer, Frank Kunkel.

Librarian, The Rev. Edward T. Kluge.

Managers, Joseph A. Rice, Granville Henry, Augustus H. Leibert, Wm. V. Knauss, the Rev. H. A. Jacobson.

Library Committee, The Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, the Rev. C. A. Haehnle, John W. Jordan, Abraham S. Schropp, John F. Bardill, J. F ed. Wolle.

Publication Committee, The Rev. Eugene Leibert, the Rev. C. A. Haehnle, Robert Rau.

Graveyard Committee, C. E. Michael, G. A. Schneebeli, S. R. Odenwelder, Frank H. Martin.

A vote of thanks was passed to John W. Jordan, LL.D., for the collection of valuable letters from General Clark, referred to in the Librarian's report below.

A lengthy discussion took place with reference to the date of the annual meeting. It was finally

Resolved, That the next annual meeting be held on the fourth Thursday of September, 1904, unless prevented by unavoidable circumstances.

The "Vesper" at 2 p. m.

Bishop Levering presided, and welcomed the members and guests, in number one hundred and seventy-eight. The verse, "What praise to Thee, my Saviour," was sung, after which the assembled company partook of the customary collation.

Announcement was made of the death, during the past year, of Mrs. Maria Seaman, a life-member.

The following papers were read:

"The Graveyard at Nazareth and some of the most noted Persons interred there," by the Rev. E. T. Kluge.

"Brief Sketch of the Indian Settlement at Nain," by the Rev. H. A. Jacobson.

The Librarian, Brother E. T. Kluge, reported the following additions to the Library and Museum:

Two valuable portraits of the Brethren Mueller, pastors at York, presented by Mrs. L. F. Fritz, of York, Pa.

A vial of volcanic dust from Mount Pelee, presented by the Rev. William Allen.

One style of Indulgence, sold by the friars of the Roman Catholic Church in the Island of Manilla, presented by John W. Jordan, LL.D.

A photograph of the First Moravian Church, Lexington Avenue, New York City, presented by Mr. J. T. Francis.

A large number of old letters from Bishop Spangenberg, Joseph Powell, Christian F. Oerter, John Hopson, Bishop Hehl, Christian Henry Rauch, Abraham Reinke, Bishop Peter Boehler, and others, together with a circular of the Helpers' Conference in 1794, presented by John W. Jordan, LL.D.

"Wyoming and Its Incidents," by Gosset Harding.

"Ancestry and Descendants of William and Joseph Hills, English Emigrants to New England, in 1638."

"David Zeisberger and His Brown Brethren," by the Rev. Wm. H. Rice, presented by the author.

"Memorial of the Wilkes-Barre Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Ministerium of Pennsylvania. — History of Lutheranism in its Vicinity." Presented by the Rev. A. C. Wuchter.

"Proceedings of the Fourth Annual Meeting," etc., of the New York State Historical Society.

From Brother A. H. Leibert, of Bethlehem, the following pamphlets were received:

Reports of the Society for Propagating the Gospel Among the Heathen, 36 numbers.

"Moravian Mission among the Germans in New York."

Synodal Sermons: "Historic Character of the American Moravian Church," 1867, by Bishop E. de Schweinitz; "Jacob's Smallness," 1868, by Bishop A. A. Reinke; "A Faithful, Effective Ministry," 1870, by the Rev. E. T. Kluge.

"Educational Platform of the Moravian Church," by the Rev. M. W. Leibert.

"Brüderheim," etc., (the work in Alberta,) by the Rev. M. W. Leibert.

Reports of the Moravian Congregation in Bethlehem, 1890 to 1902.

"Young Men's Missionary Society, 1840 to 1890," by the Rev. H. A. Jacobson, M.A.

Also, a large number of interesting and valuable books and pamphlets from Washington, D.C.

Further, letters from General Clark relating to our Indian missions in New York, etc., presented by John W. Jordan. LL.D.

During the past year one life-member died, and five active members were dropped. Three active members became life-members, while two life-members, three active members and one associate member joined the Society. The names of the new members are:

Life-members: The Union Theological Seminary (20 years), Arthur David Thaeler.

Active Members: The Rev. W. N. Schwarze, Mrs. John J. Maus, Mrs. Edward C. Beitel.

Associate Member: Frederick Conlin.

The Society now numbers one hundred and two life-members, and two hundred and thirty-three active and associate members, a total of three hundred and thirty-four.

Obituary.

Maria A. Seaman.

The Moravian Historical Society records the loss of one member by death for the year 1903, namely that of Mrs. Maria A. Seaman, who departed after several years of indisposition, in the early morning of July 20th.

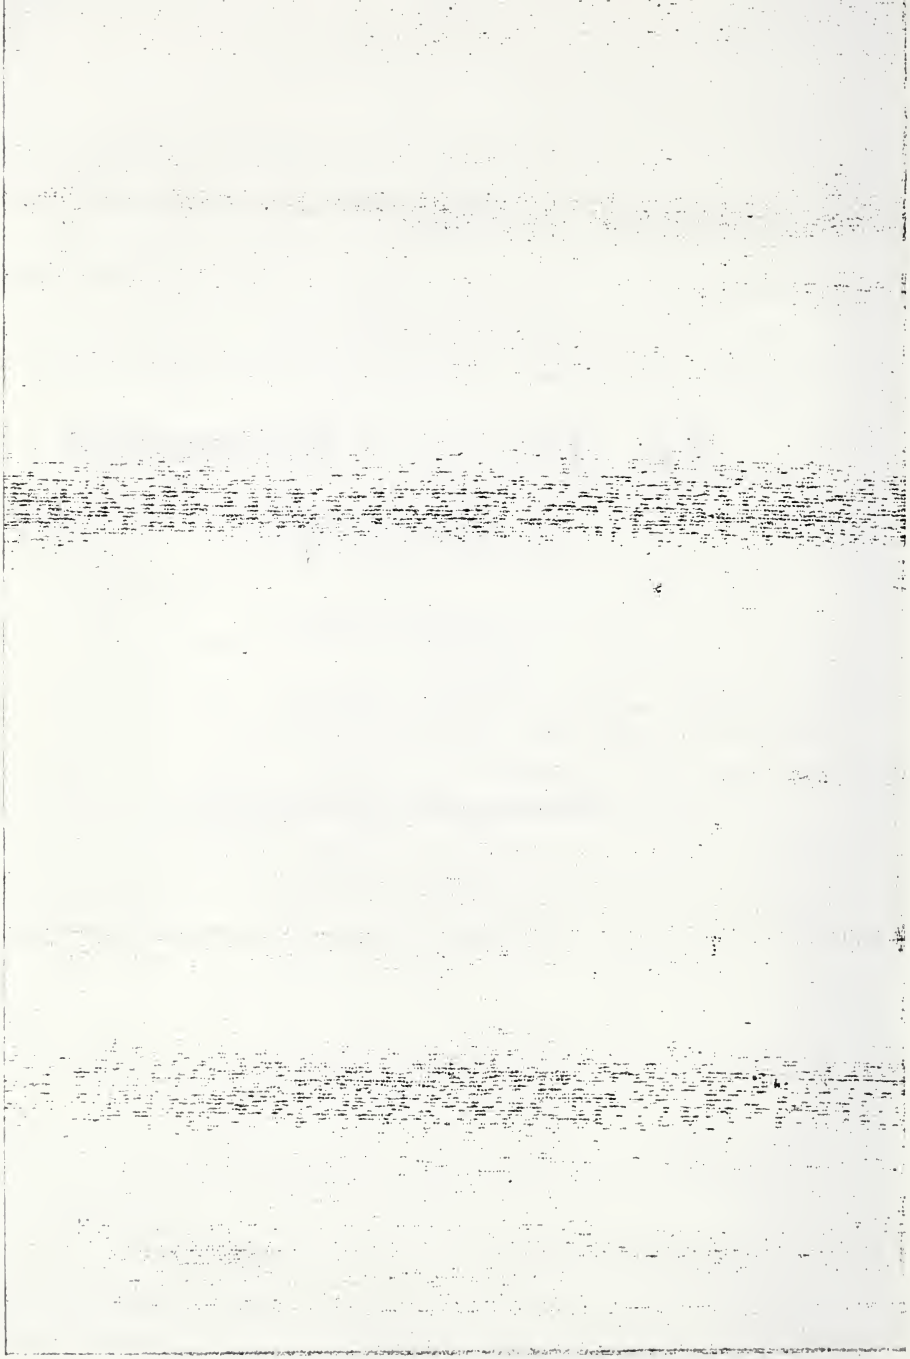
She was a daughter of the late Charles Augustus Luckenbach and his wife, Matilda, m.n. Jacobson, and was born in Bethlehem, August 11, 1831. Her father was one of the most prominent and progressive business men of the town, at the time of her birth having charge of the Bethlehem Flouring Mill.

On January 19, 1858, she was wedded to Henry J. Seaman, and they made their home in California. Several years later they returned to Bethlehem, where Mr. Seaman engaged in business, and where he died in 1875. Mrs. Seaman is survived by a son, Harry J. Seaman, of Catasauqua. She joined the Historical Society in 1893, and was a regular attendant at the annual meetings.

The Moravian Graveyards of Lititz, Pa.,

1744-1905.

BY ABRAHAM REINKE BECK.



The Moravian Graveyards of Lititz, Pa.

The first, or "old," graveyard, a small tract a quarter of an acre or so in extent, is situated within the borough limit a short distance west of the junction of Broad and Centre Streets. On its eastern boundary, two hundred feet back from the king's highway, in the woods, stood the log church which had been built by George Klein (on his land), John Bender, Jacob Scherzer, Hartmann Verdriess, Lutherans, supported by a number of adherents of the Reformed and Mennonite denominations, for the Rev. Lawrence Nyberg, a Swedish Lutheran minister of Lancaster, who subsequently united with the Moravians. Consecrated on St. James' Day, July 25, 1744, it was thenceforth called the St. James' Church. In 1749 the majority of these worshipers, who had been spiritually awakened by the preaching in this vicinity of Count Zinzendorf, in 1742, organized the Warwick (Moravian) Country Congregation, and in 1759 they united with the Lititz congregation. With the completion of the new chapel (second story of the present parsonage,) in 1763, the use of the St. James' Church, except for occasional funeral services, was abandoned; but the graveyard continued to be the burial place of the Warwick members until 1791, when they began to bury in the new graveyard, although some of them were interred in the former plot as late as 1812. Later the remains of some few friendless persons, or vagrants, were buried there.

When, in 1889, the Trustees of that time, actuated by a praiseworthy motive, gave this old graveyard a complete renovation—eradicating a jungle of brambles, repairing the enclosure, and planting trees there—the tombstones, which had been taken up in leveling the ground, were relaid, in exact, straight rows, to be sure, but with such indiscriminate misplacement that their true individual sites are now hopelessly lost; fortunately, the erring stones are covered to a depth of some inches with vegetable mould and grass.

181. Jacob Huber. Died July 4.

THE SECOND GRAVEYARD.

The second, present, graveyard is situated on a gentle acclivity to the south of the church. It was laid out after the invariable manner of Moravian burial places—the tombstones to lie flat on the graves, the sexes in segregation—on the seventh of November, 1758; and we may safely conjecture that the existent venerable cedars bordering the first avenue were planted at about the same time.

The sections to the right (men and boys), and those to the left (women and girls), formed its original extent. Two additional sections increased its size in 1851. Its first enclosure — a low wall of loose stones — was removed in the second decade of the past century, and in its place was then erected a neat fence of pales having a noble entrance gate—its arched top on the side of approach appealing to religious sentiment with these words upon it in finely executed German text:

"Selig sind die Todten die in dem Herrn sterben."

and on the reverse, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." Great the pity that this gate was removed, about the year 1850, without any attempt to restore and retain its beautifully appropriate inscriptions.

The first Easter morning service in point of time was held on the St. James' graveyard on April 14, 1759, and concluded on the new graveyard with the Te Deum; and this order was continued until 1763 when the litany was read for the first time on the present graveyard, and repeated in the St. James' Church at 9 o'clock before the sermon. "April 3, 1763: Early at 4 o'clock the congregation was awakened by the French-horns. As we left the chapel, in procession, for the graveyard, the 'waldhornisten' played 'Allein Gott in der Höh' sey Ehr'.' It snowed and rained hard."—Congregation Diary.

In 1770 trombones were substituted for the French-horns in the church-music.

At the sunrise service of Easter, March 26, 1780, the brightness of the lovely morning was suddenly eclipsed by the passing overhead of countless multitudes of wild pigeons flying, with their wonted swiftness, from North to South.

The first gravediggers for the second graveyard were the Brethren Heil and Baumgaertner.

The total number of those here interred down to April 1, 1905, is 1219.

EXPLANATION OF THE METHOD TO BE USED IN SEEKING THE LOCATION OF A GRAVE.

The avenues are numbered 1, 2, and 3; the rows of graves are given in Roman numerals, counting from the entrance to the graveyard—those to the right of each avenue being indicated by the letter r, and those to the left by the letter l; while the final numeral shows the local number of a grave, thus: Renatus-Keller, 1, r. xii, 6, February 22, means that Renatus Keller's grave is on Avenue 1, right side, twelfth row, and its local number is 6; and that he died on February 22. See draft annexed.

1. John Baumgaertner. 1, r. xiv, 1. Nov. 6. A son of Matthew and Barbara Baumgaertner, born in Lititz, Sept. 26. On November 8, the congregation assembled in front of the Gemeinhaus where the little corpse was exposed to view; and then, after an address by Bishop Hehl, in which he said that they would begin their new graveyard "mit diesem ersten Saamen Körngen," the funeral procession "of more than eighty people," proceeded to the place of interment. There the usual burial litany was read; then, all kneeling, Bishop Hehl, in fervent prayer, consecrated the spot "for those who in the future should be buried there to rest in hope till that important moment when Christ shall call His own from their graves to a glorious resurrection."

1759.

2. Peter Jacob Jürgensen. 1, r. xi, 1. Sept. 4. Unmarried.

1760.

3. Elizabeth Cassler. 1, l. xiv, 1. April 19. Infant daughter of Lewis Cassler.
4. Catharine Werner. 1, l. xiv, 2. Sept. 10. Born April 2, 1759.
5. Christian Frederick Steinman, 1, r. xix, 7. Dec. 12. Born in Dresden, Saxony, Nov. 11, 1711. He married Anna Regina Rose, and emigrated with her to America, on the "Irene," in 1749. They arrived in Lititz, from Bethlehem, in 1756, and were to board the men at work on the congregation mill. His widow moved with her son, John Frederick, to Lancaster, where she (Widow Hayne) died, May 30, 1783. There are Moravian descendants of Christian Frederick Steinman living in that city; one of whom is George Steinman, the president of the Lancaster County Historical Society.

6. Gottlieb Bezold. I, r. x, 1. Apr. 1. Unmarried. Born Nov. 1, 1720, at Bischofswerda, Saxony, where he lived as a young man, his trade that of pursemaker. Came to America, 1742, with the first "Sea Congregation." Ordained a Deacon in 1748. He was the Elder-General of all the unmarried men, ("Single Brethren") belonging to the American Moravian Church. Died while on a visit to Lititz, whither he had come to install Bro. Lorenz Bagge as the Pfleger (Spiritual Overseer) of the Single Brethren. Was the architect of the Lititz Brethren's House.
7. Anna Rebecca Merck. I, l. xiv, 3. Aug. 24. Infant daughter of Henry and Rebecca Merck.

8. Martin Bort. I, r. xi, 2. Oct. 23. Unmarried. Born in Warwick Township, Aug. 14, 1743. Learned shoemaking with Bro. Lewis Cassler.

9. Abraham Haller. I, r. xi, 3. Oct. 11. Unmarried. Only son of John Henry and Anna Maria Haller. Born at Muddy Creek (Reamstown) Jan. 9, 1744.
10. Anna Johanna Thomas. I, l. xiv, 4. Dec. 10. Infant of John and Maria Salome Thomas.

11. John Christian Fenstermacher. I, r. xix, 6. Dec. 8. Born April 14, 1697, in Meissenheim, Rhenish Bavaria. After his apprenticeship he was for six years Court Butcher to the Count von Daun, on the Rhine, and then served one year in the Dutch war. In 1741 he came to Pennsylvania with his family. His wife died at sea, leaving him with three children, one of whom was the mother of Wm. Werner of Lititz. Arrived in Philadelphia, mentally, physically and financially depressed, he was soon comforted by Count Zinzendorf and others of the Brethren, whom he joined in 1748. May, 1749, he married the widow Barbara Leibert. Came to Lititz Sept. 1, 1764, to take charge of the congregation store, on his own account for a few years, when it was to be returned to the church. After a short illness of three days duration, he died, "a happy child of grace," aged seventy years.

12. Anna Regina Niecke. I, l. xi, 1. March 10. Unmarried. Born in Reingenheim, near Manheim, April 22, 1737. In faithful service, seven years, with Fenstermacher's, and later at Bro. Jasper Payne's.

14. Christina Cassler. I, l. xiv, 6. April 18. Third daughter of Lewis and Christina Cassler, born 1765. Died of small-pox.

15. Anna Elizabeth Cassler. I, l, xiv, 7. April 27. Same parents. Born July 6, 1767. Died of small-pox.
16. Anna Maria Werner, m.n. Schuchard. I, l. xix, 1. May 13. Born in Heidelberg Township, June 26, 1727. Married William Werner. They had five children; Catharina, and, surviving her, Rosina, Frederick, Nathaniel and John.

17. Christian Henry Sproge. I, r. xi, 4. May 16. Unmarried. Born April 23, 1729, in Curland near Bauske. By trade a mason. Came to Lititz, 1758, one of the original six brethren to occupy the new Brethren's House. Highly esteemed as superintendent of the larger boys. Some of his last work was the building of the first corpse depository (Leichen Capellchen), a vault in the basement of the Gemeinhaus (now the parsonage), and his own mortal remains were the first to lie there. (The entrance to this vault was on the west side of the house, under an outside stairway used by the brethren in going to the Saal, or meeting-place of the congregation, on the second floor. The present corpse-house was built, with the church, in 1787.)

1771.

18. John Valentine Grosh. I, r. xix, 5. April 17. Born Jan. 6, 1706, at Eichloch in the Palatinate. In 1728 he married Barbara Sandman. They had twelve children. In 1743 they came to Pennsylvania with five children remaining to them, and settled near Lititz. In 1749 he joined the Warwick (Moravian) Congregation, was its first chief-sacristan, and for many years its Steward. In 1764 he moved to Lititz, where he was appointed Curator of the Sisters' "Choir," and, again, chief sacristan. On April 15, of the above year, he was stricken with paralysis, remaining unconscious until his death. There are descendants of his living in Lititz.
19. Carl August Ludewig. I, r. xi, 5. July 2. Unmarried. Born March 9, 1729, in Wernerode, Thuringia. A potter.
20. Gottlieb Coelln. I, r. xiv, 2. July 7. Infant son of Claus and Elizabeth Coelln, and twin brother of John Coelln.
21. Maria Barbara Geitner. I, l. xiii, 1. Aug. 22. Born June 13, 1764. Daughter of John George Geitner.
22. Christian Gottlieb Hoffman. I, r. x, 2. Aug. 25. Unmarried. Born in Friedersdorf, Upper Lusatia, Dec. 21, 1715. For seven years, from 1765, he was the universally beloved Pfleger of the Single Brethren.
23. Elizabeth Hall, m.n. Kalkloeser. I, l. xix, 2. Oct. 3. Born in Germantown, Feb. 1, 1738. Married James Hall, Oct. 23, 1770. Died of complications arising from the birth of a son.
24. Thomas Utley. I, r. xi, 6. Nov. 11. An unmarried son of the Rev. Richard Utley, born in Bethlehem, June 27, 1751. Shoemaker. A consumptive, he came here in August, 1770, at the suggestion of Bro. Tobias Beckel, who was much attached to him, to have medical treatment from a certain Dr. Blank—"the old Swiss doctor"—who at that time practised in this neighborhood. In connection with the burial of this Brother, the Brethren's House Diary gives us the following singular circumstance: When the gravedigger had partly filled in the grave he heard three distinct knocks which seemed to him to come from the inside of the coffin-lid. He quickly called a number of the brethren to the spot, and they decided to re-open the coffin, for if they failed to do so, an unfounded "talk" would be the result: therefore, it was taken up and opened; but Brother Thomas lay just as he had been deposited there, and not a sign of vitality was apparent. The brethren inferred that the knockings, which were heard again as they re-filled the grave, arose from the pressure of ground on the coffin-lid.

25. Elizabeth Brinkman. 1, l. xi, 2. March 8. Unmarried Sister. Born in York, Jan. 8, 1751.
26. Abraham Delker. 1, r. xi, 7. March 13. Unmarried. Born in Dornhan, Würtemberg, Aug. 26, 1746.

29. Catharine Elizabeth Scheffel. 1, l. xiii, 2. Feb. 20. Infant daughter of the foregoing parents.
30. Christian Tshudy. 1, r. xix, 4. March 3. Born in Warwick Township, April 20, 1741. His parents were Henry and Catharine Tshudy, members of the Warwick Moravian congregation. Married, 1762, Eva Barbara Kiesel. Moved to Lititz, 1762, hearty permission having been accorded him as "a worthy acquisition" to the community. Built a house on Main St., about midway of the present Seminary grounds, and followed his work as a day-laborer. He had four children: John Jacob, Christian, Anna Maria (married Rev. John Maehr) and Matthias. Christian Tshudy, Jr., moved to Ohio, where his descendants are living.
31. Maria Christina Schmidt. 1, l. xi, 4. April 19. The remarkable experience of this unmarried Sister deserves the larger space devoted to it. She was born in Conewago, near York, Pa., Aug. 1, 1746. At an early age the preaching of Moravian itinerants made an impression upon her heart, and she beseeched the Lord to make her His happy child and grant her wish to join, eventually, the sweet Sisterhood in Bethlehem. When the congregation at Manocasy (Graceham) Md., was founded, her father, Caspar Schmidt, and his family moved thither so that they might be with the Brethren. During the French and Indian War, when Christina was nine years old, in August, 1755, the dwellers in that locality were thrown into consternation by the swift irruption of a band of ravaging, murderous Indians (French). The Schmidts and others sought refuge in the Moravian school-house, but Christina and her father were eight miles away from it on his plantation. Suddenly, from the forest, they heard the sharp crack of a rifle! The father threw his child upon a horse, telling her to ride as fast as she could to the shelter of the school-house, but the horse balked and refused to move, while several Indians appeared, rapidly crossing the clearing. Schmidt's first impulse was to remain with his daughter, but to do that he knew was to be killed on the spot, and others needed his protection; so he fled precipitately, fortunately escaping some bullets sent after him. Capturing Christina, an Indian swung her on to his back and made away with her, she vigorously protesting and making frantic appeal to be set free; to all of which he only answered "Yes, yes," and strode away the faster. In a desperation almost as comical as it was futile, she drew from her clothing a pin and with all her little force jabbed it into his broad back, which caused him to put her to the ground and despoil her of her pins. After that, a threatening tomahawk always kept her quiet. Now the whole band turned upon its homeward route, traveling northward. On this journey Christina's tender eyes beheld the most frightful massacres; and when, upon coming to one of their settlements destroyed by the English, the avenging Indians took some of her fellow-captives, bound them to trees, and, thrusting into their bodies pointed sticks of resinous wood, set fire to them—a continuant torture from morning to night—the savage fiends compelled her to laugh with them at the agony of their victims. Approaching their town—its score of dogs giving timely notice of their coming—they were met and welcomed with wild shouting and much rude drumming, by the young braves and the women and children. Among the Indians, for several years, she was not treated unkindly. Once she was rescued from the death-hug of a bear, and at another time she had nearly drowned; "But," says she, "surely the Saviour remembered that I should so much like to live and die with the Brethren." In 1757, to her infinite joy, she was taken by three chiefs to Philadelphia, where, as a result of a treaty of peace, she was set at liberty, finding a home in a kind Quaker family. During her stay with them a man who had "dreamed" that she was his kidnapped child came to the city, claimed her, and, following the decision of a magistrate, took her, despite her denial of him, with him to Lancaster. "My continual prayer," she writes, "was that the good Lord would restore me to my true parents; and He heard me, too." To the Synod of 1758, convened in Lancaster, came her father and mother; they heard of the child, went to see her, there was mutual recognition, a dispute with the pretended father, and, finally, recourse to a Justice of the Peace who said to the Schmidts, "Take her, for flesh and blood will not be denied!" Then the happy parents with their child repaired to the "school-house" (in West Orange St.) where they were presented to the assembled synod and congregation by Brother Joseph (Spangenberg) who, taking Christina by the hand, asked her father and mother, "Will you give this child to the Saviour and the Brethren?" So, after a visit to her Maryland home, she joined the Sisters' "Choir" in Bethlehem. In 1770, because of ill-health, consumption, she was transferred to the Sisters' House in Lititz, so that she might have the medical attention of Dr. Fahnestock of Ephrata; then came a temporary restoration, a recurrence, and death in her twenty-eighth year.

32. Sarah Delker. 1, l. xi, 5. Nov. 24. Unmarried Sister. Born in Dornhan, Wuertemberg, Sept. 7, 1748.

37. Anna Barbara Yungblut. 1, l. xi, 6. April 19. Unmarried Sister. Born in Bethel on the Swatara, May 16, 1751.

1776.

38. Gottfried Roesler. 1, r. xix, 3. Jan. 6. Born April 11, 1711, in Neustadt near Dresden, Saxony. Came to Pennsylvania in 1750. Ordained a Deacon of the Church in 1759, at the Synod in Lancaster. Served at Donegal, Hebron, Warwick and in other country congregations. His last seven years were spent in Lititz as schoolmaster for the Warwick boys. Married Marianne Mueller. They had two children, twins, who died soon after birth. On the morning of Jan. 6, as he was returning from a country visit, he was stricken with sudden death and fell, as he was found, by the roadside, his face imbedded in the snow. His funeral was largely attended, for, "because of his fine school" he was respected and loved by old and young.
39. Christian Thomas. 1, r. x, 5. Feb. 4. Unmarried. Born in Lancaster, Nov. 1, 1754, and came with his parents John and Maria Salome (m.n. Gorner) Thomas to Lititz in 1759. Exceptionally talented in music, he was the first organist of the Lititz congregation. Died of miliary fever.
40. Hans Christopher Christensen. 1, r. x, 6. Sept. 15. Unmarried. Born Feb. 7, 1716, near Hadersleben, Holstein. Joined the Moravians, in Herrnhut, 1745. Came to Bethlehem, 1751. An expert mill-wright and hydraulic engineer, he built the first oil-mill and the water-works in Bethlehem; a grist and saw-mill in Bethabara, N. C.; the same for Hope, N. J., and, besides many more, the first grist and saw-mill in Lititz, in 1757. Upon hearing of the total destruction by fire, in 1775, of the latter, he volunteered his services, although in an advanced stage of consumption, to build a new one (which is still standing); and this he accomplished, but at such expense of his waning strength that he was constrained to take a bed in the infirmary of the Brethren's House, and there he died.

41. Margaretha Elizabeth Grubé, m.n. Krieger. I, l. xx, 2. Nov. 10. Born Nov. 12, 1716, at Reval, Livonia. In 1754 she was married to Joachim Busse, going with him to Herrnhut and uniting with the Moravians. Together they went, 1751, as missionaries to St. Thomas, where her husband died, leaving her with eight children, of whom Andrew Busse (once pastor in Nazareth) was the eldest. In the same year she came to Bethlehem, and in 1755 was married to Bernhard Adam Grubé, with whom she served in the Indian missions of Gnadenhuetten, Pachgatgoch and Wechquetank, and accompanied the Moravian Indians into exile, for safety, to Province Island, and, subsequently, to the "Barracks" in Philadelphia. During these missionary years she suffered hardships innumerable. In Pachgatgoch, for instance, the winter night was so bitterly cold in their wigwam, that to save her baby's life she must make its sleeping place between two great Indian dogs. In May, 1765, they were called to Lititz, her husband to be co-pastor with Bishop Hehl and have the superintendence of the congregation schools; also to organize a choir and church orchestra. For eleven years she served as Spiritual Overseer of the married Sisters. They had one daughter, Anna Johanna, who married the Rev. John Martin Beck. Her final illness was caused by exposure to extremely inclement weather as she came, in an open conveyance, from a visit in Bethlehem to Lititz. Her husband wrote of her "She was a woman of much experience."

42. Susanna Michler. I, l. xx, 3. Dec. 9. Born March 15, 1722, in Wildberg, Würtemberg. United with the Brethren at Marienborn, 1743. There she was married to John George Ohneberg, coming, same year, with him to Bethlehem. In 1744 they moved to Nazareth, where, in the economy of that time, they superintended the clearing of the land and establishing of the farms. In 1748 they had charge of the school in Macungie (Emmaus) and later that of Lancaster. Received a call, 1750, as missionaries to St. Thomas, W. I., and then to St. Croix. Returned to Bethlehem, 1760, where her husband died. They had fifteen children. In 1762 she married Rev. John Michler, served with him in the school in Nazareth Hall, and then they were called, she for the second time, to the West India mission, Jamaica. Returned, 1770, and served in Heidelberg, Pa. In 1776 they sought retirement in Lititz, and here she died.

43. Peter Mordick. I, r. x, 7. Jan. 19. Unmarried. Born in Nazareth Sept. 7, 1755. Nailsmith. Died, a patient sufferer, of an epidemic pectoral fever.

44. Elias Glotz. I, r. xix, 2. Feb. 18. Born Dec. 7, 1745; oldest son of Albrecht and Margaretha (m.n. Rieth, of Tulpehockon) Glotz. Employed on the farm of John Henry Haller, whose daughter Elizabeth he married. No children.

45. Anna Maria Shank. I, l. xi, 7. Feb. 26. Unmarried Sister. Born Jan. 24, 1749, in Upper Kiepingen, Würtemberg. Came, in her fourth year, with her parents, to this country. In her fifteenth year she was "awakened" by the personal persuasion of David Zeisberger, giving him "her hand to it" to remain true to the Saviour. Came to Lititz, 1768, engaged in domestic service in Jasper Payne's family, and in 1770 moved into the Sisters' House, where she died of consumption.

46. Elizabeth Beck. I, l. x, 7. Sept. 4. Unmarried Sister. A daughter of the Rev. Henry Beck, she was born in Bethlehem, Oct. 11, 1746. Came in 1763 to the Lititz Sisters' House. Superintendent of the weaving department. Died of consumption.

47. Anna Maria Hehl. I, l. xx, 1. Nov. 22. Beloved wife of Bishop Matthew Hehl. Born in Berthelsdorf, Upper Lusatia, Nov. 17, 1716. Her parents were Christopher and Helena (m. n. Henk) Jaehne, descendants of Moravian exiles. Spiritually awakened in the children's revival of 1727, in Herrnhut. In 1733, in her seventeenth year, previously confirmed in Herrnhut, she partook for the first time of the Lord's Supper, and was blessed by Pastor Rothe, in the church of Berthelsdorf. In 1737, Nov. 17, she was married to Matthew Hehl who, while she had charge of the girls in the Herrnhut Orphanage, served in the same situation for the boys. Three children were born to them: John and Johanna Maria, both dying in infancy, and Mathew Leonhard, born in Herrnhut, in 1749. In August, 1751, they received their call to Pennsylvania. Leaving their little son at school in Barby—he rejoined them after nineteen years—they sailed from London, arriving in Bethlehem, Dec. 10. In November, 1756, they came to Lititz, Bro. Hehl a newly-consecrated bishop of the Brethren's Church. She died of a pectoral fever on the fortieth anniversary of their marriage.

48. Catharina Volck. I, l. x, 6. Dec. 12. Unmarried Sister. Born April 2, 1743, in Lynn, Pa.

49. John Jacob Schmick. I, r. xx, 2. Jan. 23. Presbyter. Born Oct. 19, 1714, at Koenigsberg, Prussia. While in charge of a Lutheran congregation in Livonia, he became acquainted with the Moravians and united with them in 1748. Came to Bethlehem in 1751, destined for service in the Indian mission. 1752, ordained a Deacon of the Church. Ordained a presbyter in 1759. Married Johanna Ingerheidt. With his wife he labored in various missions. A proficient in the Mohican language, and adopted by the Shawanese into their nation. Was with the Christian Indians in exile, for safety, in Philadelphia, and, after their release, led them to Wyalusing. His last mission was at Gnadenhuetten, Ohio. In August, 1777, he came to Lititz, and was appointed an assistant to Bishop Hehl, while his wife became the Spiritual Overseer of the Married Sisters.

When, in December, the U. S. military hospital was established in the Brethren's House, he preached faithfully to the wretched soldiery; and there he contracted the "camp-fever" of which he died. One son, John Jacob, survived him; two daughters preceded him into eternity.

50. Catharina Blickensderfer, m.n. Sherzer. I, l. xix, 4. Jan. 27. Born Oct. 14, 1727, in Eisenbach, Rhenish Bavaria. Married Christian Blickensderfer, and came with him and two children, first to Philadelphia, where they lived one and a half years, and then to a farm near Lititz. In 1761 they built a house in the village and moved into it. Of her nine children two sons and a daughter survived her. Died of the epidemic "camp-fever."

51. Henry Oerter. I, r. xii, 2. Jan. 31. Born in Bethlehem, April 10, 1752; second son of Christian Frederick Oerter, and twin-brother of Anna Oerter. Unmarried. Came to Lititz, 1775, to take charge of the Brethren's smithy. Died of the epidemic "camp-fever."

52. Christopher Pohl. I, r. xii, 1. Feb. 1. Unmarried. Born Jan. 6, 1724, in Habendorf, Lower Silesia. Came to Lititz, 1759, and here he was for nineteen years cook in the Brethren's House. Died of the epidemic "camp-fever."

53. Elizabeth Michler. I, l. x, 5. March 13. Unmarried Sister. Born on the Island of St. Thomas, where her parents were missionaries, April 4, 1756.

54. Elizabeth Ricksecker, m.n. Krieger. I, l. xix, 5. Sept. 3. Wife of Peter Ricksecker. Born Dec. 2, 1751, in Manocasy, Md. Had two children, a son and a daughter. Died four hours after the birth of the latter.

56. Matthew Baumgaertner. I, r. xx, 3. April 19. Born in Switzerland, Oct. 6, 1708. Settled in Donegal, but, in 1758, having fled for safety from the Indians to Lititz, he received permission to remain here. By his first wife he had one daughter, Catharina; by the second (m.n. Goepfert) he had twelve children, six surviving him.

57. Maria Elizabeth Ricksecker. I, l. xiii, 3. June 5. Infant daughter of Peter Ricksecker (at the fulling-mill). Aged 9 months.

58. Jasper Payne. I, r. xx, 4. July 3. Born April 23, 1708, in Twickenham, England. Came in 1743 with his wife and aged mother to Bethlehem, where he was made steward of the Economy. Ordained a Deacon of the Church, 1753. Served several years in Philadelphia, but for the most part, labored in the Gospel in the rural churches. In 1767 he came to Lititz to take charge of the congregation store. By his second wife (m.n. Philippina Way, of New London, Conn.) he had two sons, Jasper and Nathaniel, both surviving him.

59. Johanna Rosina Rauch. I, l. xiii, 4. Jan. 11. Infant of John Henry and Catharine Rauch.

60. Catherine Toon. I, l. x, 4. Jan. 11. Unmarried Sister. Born March 9, 1761. A poor, homeless and consumptive girl of eighteen years, she endeavored, in June, 1799, to make her way, as best she might, from Carroll's Manor, Maryland, to Lititz, where she hoped to be received into the Sisters' House, her half-sister Mary Tippet, being one of that "choir." Arrived at an inn in Taneytown, with seventy more miles to go, the landlord kindly allowed her to remain there for a short time in the hope that some passing conveyance might take her farther on her way. "After a few days, Col. Curtis Grubb came in his coach to the inn. I begged him to take me with him to the neighborhood of Lancaster, but he refused me point-blank, saying that he could not drag a sick woman about with him. Then, upon my further entreaty, he asked me, 'Well, where, near Lancaster, do you wish to go?' To Lititz, to my sister, said I. 'Have you a sister in Lititz—and does she belong to the Brethren? Well, then I will take you with me.' During the whole journey he treated me with the tenderness of a father; would not allow me to pay for anything, and ordered for me such delicacies as were best adapted to my enfeebled condition. He repeatedly assured me, in words of kind encouragement, how happy I should be if I obtained leave to live with the Brethren and Sisters at Lititz, for he knew them to be true children of God. When we were come four miles from Lititz where his homeward way led off from the Lititz road, (at Neffsville, via Manheim for Mt. Hope) he gave me a letter he had written to Bro. Andrew Horn (landlord of Zum Anker Inn near Lititz) to insure my good reception with him; placed me in the care of his secretary for the remaining distance, and then, at parting with me, pressed into my hand a beautiful piece of gold. Oh, God, reward him for his kindness!"

61. John Renatus Christ. I, r. xiv, 5. Jan. 21. Infant son of Peter and Juliana Christ.

62. Anna Magdalena Meyer. I, l. x, 3. April 6. Unmarried Sister. Born in Ulm, May 1, 1710. Came to Lititz, 1762, to be the first Pflegerin (Spiritual Overseer) in the new Sisters' House; but in 1764 she was superseded in this office by Sr. Augustine and given that of Warden of her "choir," a position which she filled admirably for sixteen years to her end.

63. Maria Kreiter, m.n. Hirschy. I, l. xix, 6. Aug. 31. Born in Hempfield Township, 1728. Wife of Peter Kreiter. They moved to Lititz in 1770. Eight children, all of whom survived her.

64. Anna Dorothea Glotz. I, l. x, 2. Sept. 19. Unmarried Sister. Consumption.

65. John George Ohneberg. I, r. xii, 4. April 24. Unmarried. Born on the Island of St. Croix, Dec. 19, 1751.

66. Rosina Christ. I, l. xiii, 5. May 24. Daughter of Peter Christ, aged four years and nine months. Her death was caused by the lodgement of a bean in her windpipe.

67. Christian Henry Werner. I, r. xiv, 6. May 26. Born in Lititz, 1775.

68. Anna Christina Francke, m.n. Bezold. I, l. xx, 4. June 14. Wife of Rev. John Chistopher Francke. Born Oct. 28, 1713, in Halle, Saxony. Came to Lititz, 1763. Of three sons and four daughters only John Immanuel and Agnes survived her.
69. Anna Maria Cassler. I, l. x, 1. Sept. 17. Unmarried Sister. Born in Lititz, April 1, 1761. Daughter of Lewis and Christina Cassler.
70. Adolph Meyer. I, r. xx, 5. Oct. 6. Physician and surgeon to the Lititz congregation. Born in Westerhausen, Saxony, March 15, 1714. Learned his profession from his father. United with the Brethren in Herrnhut, 1736. In 1739 he married Mary Dorothea Cartaus, and received a call to Pennsylvania. His wife, because of sickness, could not accompany him; later she sailed for America but died off the Banks of Newfoundland and was buried at sea. Arrived in Philadelphia, Dr. Meyer was sent to Nazareth where he practiced medicine and was the first Elder of the congregation. In 1745 he married Maria Justina Kraft, and in 1746 they were called to take charge of the Boys' School in Fredericktown, remaining in that situation until the close of 1749. Because of Sr. Meyer's continual ill-health, they asked for their release and began housekeeping for themselves, Dr. Meyer serving his neighborhood with his medical and surgical knowledge. "Our attachment to the Congregation was never lessened, and although we did not visit it, we, as was the case with the Prophet Daniel, never lost our remembrance of or our longing for it." At that time his son Christian—a bright young man—died. "Visited by the Brethren, their kind love melted my heart, and made us long to live again in a Gemein-ort" (Congregation settlement). Therefore they were appointed to Lititz, and came hither June 6, 1776.
71. Samuel Krause. I, r. xii, 5. Oct. 22. Unmarried. Born in Nazareth, Nov. 22, 1749. Master of domestic affairs in the Brethren's House. Died of an epidemic fever.

73. John Renatus Keller. I, r. xii, 6. Feb. 22. Unmarried. Born Aug. 23, 1727. In 1773 he was ordained a Deacon of the church and then received a call to Pennsylvania, coming the same year to Lititz. Warden of the Single Brethren's "choir." Died of consumption.
74. Elizabeth Ricksecker. I, l. xii, 7. May 7. Unmarried Sister. Born in Warwick, 1762. Daughter of Peter Ricksecker.
75. John Christopher Francke. I, r. xii, 7. Aug. 22. Born in Schneeberg, Saxony, Dec. 30, 1711. Converted by the preaching of Zinzendorf in Berlin. Married Anna Christina Bezold. Came to this country, 1742. Director of the Boys' Schools in Nazareth, Fredericktown, Oley and Macungie. Ordained a Deacon of the Church, 1749. In Lititz, from 1763, he and his wife had the superintendence of the married "choir" and he was the congregation's Warden. He was stricken with apoplexy while sitting, as president, at a meeting of the Aufseher Collegium (Committee of Temporal Affairs), dying soon afterwards.

76. Sophia Dorothea Gattermeyer. 1, l. xii, 6. Aug. 29. Unmarried Sister. Born in Bethlehem, Jan. 19, 1751. Her father, John Gattermeyer, was killed by the Indians in the massacre at Gnadenhuetten on the Mahony, 1755. Consumption.

78. John Gottfried Zahm. 1, r. xii, 7. Dec. 19. Unmarried. Born in Bethlehem, May 10, 1753. Came in 1779 to Lititz as Pfleger (Spiritual Overseer) of the Single Brethren. Both he and his second in authority, (Renatus Keller, Warden, No. 73) were remarkably successful in their calling with the young men. They lie side by side on the graveyard. A fine musician. Ordained a Deacon of the Church a few months before his death. Consumption.

79. Catharine Rauch, m.n. Gutjahr. 1, l. xviii, 1. Jan. 2. Born in Lancaster, Feb. 3, 1747. First wife of John Henry Rauch. Consumption.

80. Martha, an Indian. 1, l. xii, 4. March 20. Unmarried Sister. Born in Shecomeko, 1739. Her parents were Thomas and Esther, Mohicans. Baptized by Christian Henry Rauch. 1748, was servitress in the Germantown Moravian School; 1763-64, in exile with the Christian Indians in Philadelphia. Came in 1771 to Lititz to be the mistress-tailoress in the Sisters' House. Served, also, several years as a teacher in the congregation day-school for girls.

81. Dorothea Klein, m.n. Davis. 1, l. xviii, 2. July 23. Born Aug. 28, 1721, "on the Schuylkill." Was converted by Zinzendorf when he, with other Brethren, lodged in her brother-in-law's barn. Her third husband was George Klein, popularly known as the founder of Lititz. Lived in Bethlehem, but came to Lititz to have the treatment of Dr. Fahnestock, of Ephrata, for a cancerous affection about her head. Somewhat improved she returned to her home, but, her malady increasing again, she came back to Lititz to have her physician's care until her death, which she knew to be inevitable. About the time of her funeral an express came to Lititz with the news of her husband's death in Bethlehem. (George Klein and his first wife, Anna, m.n. Bender, both came from Kirchardt in the Palatinate. In 1754 he donated 491 acres of land to the Lititz Congregation, receiving from the church an annuity of £70 during his life).

82. John Paul Hennig. 1, r. xii, 8. Aug. 21. Unmarried. Born Jan. 1, 1715, of Roman Catholic parents. United with the Moravians in Herrnhaag, 1743. Came to this country in 1750, and was employed in the Economy at Christianspring as cook, and also as a teacher of the boys. To Lititz in 1767 as master-shoemaker in the Brethrens' House.

Her father was a distinguished surgeon, but an improvident man; consequently, his wife, after his death, finding herself in straitened circumstances, gladly accepted an invitation from her married sister to come to Philadelphia and have a home with her. There the rough behavior of Mary's uncle (Atwood, a merchant, an unprincipled man) caused her much unhappiness; so that, after she had been spiritually awakened by the preaching of Brother Rogers, and told about Bethlehem and its Sisters' House by Valentine Haidt, the artist, she went there, in 1756, and joined that Sisterhood. In 1762 she came to live in the Lititz Sisters' House, and here, secure in God's love and the affection of her "choir" and the congregation, she served on the staff of her Pflegerin faithfully to the close of her life as the "Schreiber"—writer of the diary, copyist, book-keeper and secretary. She was also the "Fremden-dienerin" (visitors' guide), making in that capacity likewise many friends—among them those fine gentlemen Drs. Brown and Allison, who were attached to the U. S. Military Hospital, here, in 1778, and who after their removal corresponded with her. She died of bronchitis.

202. John Schetter. I, r. xiii, 11. Aug. 27. Aged 7 months.

203. Maria Russmeyer, m.n. Evans. I, l. xvii, 11. Sept. 21. Born Aug. 15, 1721, in Philadelphia; a daughter of Peter and Mary (Moore) Evans, and wife of Rev. Albrecht Russmeyer (No. 169). She had four children, of whom Maria, wife of Christian Schropp, survived her. Died of an epidemic fever.

204. Anna Christina Meder, m.n. Weber. I, l. xvi, 1. Sept. 29. She was born 1741, in Wittgenstein, Germany. Her first husband was the Rev. Samuel Angerman, a missionary in Barbadoes, W. I., where he died; her second husband the Rev. John Meder, also a missionary in Barbadoes, but at the time of her death the Principal of the Girls' School in Lititz, (Linden Hall Seminary). In her first marriage she had one son, John Samuel, and in the second, another son, Christian Frederick, both surviving her in England.

205. Conrad Westhaefer. I, r. xx, 9. Oct. 25. Born Nov. 19, 1737, in Muddy Creek (properly Mode Creek), Pa. His parents were Valentine Westhaefer, farmer, and Christina, m.n. Sandritter. In 1764 he married Catharine Heil, and had eleven children. His daughter Catharine married Gottfried Sebastian Oppelt, missionary among the Indians; Conrad, Jr., and John Gottfried moved to Ohio; John Leonhard and Jacob to York County. The father was a wheelwright.

206. Frederick Kreiter. I, r. xiii, 12. Nov. 5. Infant son of Peter Abraham Kreiter.

207. John Becker, (his family name was Knecht). 1, l. xix, 9. Dec. 7. Born 1722, in Eberbach, Palatinate. Married Margaret Grosh, and had two sons, one of whom, John Leonhard, in Northampton Co., survived him. By trade a baker, but, as successor to Jasper Payne, he was for a number of years the congregation storekeeper.

208. Anna Maria Schropp, m.n. Russmeyer. 1, l. xvi, 2. Dec. 29. She was born in Bethlehem, July 12, 1757. In 1793 she married Christian Schropp, organist and schoolmaster in Lititz, and one son, Christian Russmeyer Schropp, was born to them.

209. John Christopher Koenig. 1, r. xviii, 9. June 7. A wheelwright, living near Lititz. He was born, 1745, in Koemnitz, Lower Silesia. Married, 1793, the widow Margaret Mueller, m.n. Schuetler.

210. Verona Kiesel, m.n. Leithold. 1, l. xvi, 3. June 29. She was born 1730, in Switzerland. Wife of George Frederick Kiesel. She had four sons and five daughters; one of the latter married Rev. Paul Weiss, pastor in Schoeneck. Her son, Abraham Frederick, lived near Lititz.

211. John Goepfert. 1, r. xvii. 9. Oct. 18. He was born in Mount Joy Township, 1745. A linen-weaver. He married Elizabeth Etter, and had five children; Christina married Christian Frederick, carpenter, and Magdalena married Daniel Rickert, farmer.

215. Anna Rosina Schenk. 1, l. ix, 2. March 10. Unmarried Sister. Born in Lancaster, 1770.

216. Claus Coelln. 1, r. xvi, 2. April 6. Born, 1724, in Neuendorf, Holstein. United with the Moravians in Herrnhut, where he learned his trade of carpentry. Came to America in 1754, and after living two years in Nazareth, where he assisted in the building of Nazareth Hall, was sent to Lititz, and here he staid for the remainder of his life. In 1768 he married Elizabeth Lack, with whom he had five children: Anna Bernhardina (Harry), Gottlieb, John (who moved to York), Henry Renatus, a sailor, and Christian David, in the neighborhood. He was the master-carpenter who built the Brethren's and Sisters' Houses, the Gemeinhaus (present parsonage), the church, and nearly all of the houses in early Lititz; a fact to which he pointed, in his old age, with pardonable pride. For a few years he had charge of the congregation mill.

217. Niels Tillofson. 1, r. xvi, 3. April 15. He was born Feb. 4, 1745, in Holstein. After serving as a teacher in the Niesky Boys' School, and as the Superintendent of the Single Brethren in Gracehill, Ireland, he came, in 1791, to this country, and was ordained a Deacon of the Church by Bishop Ettwein. He married Hannah Warner; they had no children. Labored in the Gospel in Shoeneck, Gnadenhuetten on the Mahony, and was the Warden at Nazareth. Served also in Hope, N. J., but there he had the misfortune to fall into the drink habit, which, in addition to his self-imposed incompetency, gave offence to the congregation; therefore he was sent in retirement to Lititz, where, according to his pastor, Bishop Herbst, he did all he could to atone by repentant prayer and ever ready helpfulness for his past shame; and the same authority tells us that he had the love, or good-will, of every one.

218. Francis Boehler. 1, r. xvi, 4. June 4. He was born in Frankfort-on-the-Main, Sept., 1722. His parents were John Conrad and Elizabeth Antoinette (Hauf) Boehler. His first wife was Anna Catharine Jag, who died at Oldman's Creek, N. J., 1784. A second marriage was with the widow Anna (Rose) Unger. Two children died in their infancy. He was a retired minister, and died here while on a visit from Bethlehem.

Spiritually awakened by the preaching of Moravian itinerants in his native city, he united with the Brethren in Neuwied, and came to be a very successful teacher there in the Boys' School. In 1786 he received a call to America. On the voyage hither he made a providential escape—"a direct answer to the prayers of the Brethren on board"—from imminent death or slavery; for their vessel was chased by an Algerine pirate who had come so near them that the gleam of his crew's naked sabres could be seen and their blood-thirsty threats distinctly heard, when his ship was caught and whirled in a sudden squall, its rigging torn, and its progress hindered, leaving the Brethren's vessel to sail away in peace. Some of his fellow-voyagers—destined for Lititz—were John Herbst (later, Bishop), John Erdman Oehme, and Gottlieb Eichler, the latter also mentioning in his memoir the above occurrence. In Bethlehem he was again engaged in teaching boys, until, in 1790, he married Anna Johanna Grubé and went with her to his first ministry in Emmaus, he having been previously ordained a Deacon of the Church by Bishop Huebner. Other pastorates of his were Graceham, Donegal, Bethel, Lancaster (twice) and York. His wife died in 1808. Their children were John, Benigna Louise, and Johanna Elizabeth. In 1812 he married Mary Magdalena Kreiter, m.n. Grosh, and with her served the Lititz congregation as Superintendents of the Married Members, he at the same time practicing medicine, in which he had considerable skill.

Becoming acquainted with the Brethren and spiritually influenced by the preaching of Brother Powell, in Carroll's Manor, he came to Lititz, in 1772, and here joined the Brotherhood. Having acquired some knowledge of carpentry, he assisted in the re-building of the congregation mill (destroyed by fire in 1775) and the erection of our church, in 1787; but his service thereafter was that of a general utility man in the community—"making a partition for Brother Benade," candle-boxes for the chandler, a "slay" for Brother Eggert (the Warden); ringing the noon-hour bell, winding the town-clock, keeping the fire-engine in repair, etc. Well-authenticated accounts of his uncommon physical agility and strength have come down to us; we know, too, that he had a charming way with children,—so that Greenbury striding down the street with little boys and girls clustered about or clinging to him was, in that time, a not unfamiliar sight; and we have the word of Bishop Benade for it that he was a beautiful character—simple, true-hearted, ever-helpful, and a devoted Christian. The last few years of his long life he passed in the home and companionship of his old friend Martin Hansen.

751. John William Rauch. 3, l. xxiii, 13. March 11. Born in Lititz, Aug. 18, 1790; a son of John Henry and Anna Christina (Stohler) Rauch. In 1814 he married Barbara Rudy, who died in 1825. His second wife was Anna Rosina Busse, of Nazareth, and his third union was with the widow Lucetta (Ritter) Wolle. Five children in the first marriage, two in the second. A confectioner and baker; in the latter line he was the first maker, here, of bretzels. He served the congregation as a member of the Aufseher Collegium and as a Trustee; and for the larger part of his life was prominent in church-music as a tenor singer, trombonist (soprano), and first violinist. Remembrance, yet unfaded, remains to many, of the fine old gentleman, in his drooping cloak, with his handsome ivory-rimmed violin under his arm, on his way to play in lovefeast. A real poet, he touched his lyre often to enhance the interest of a festal occasion, to comfort the mourner, and to make happier by his beautiful lines the young bridal couple.

His second wife was Caroline Harbaugh, with whom he had two sons and two daughters. In 1828 he opened a general store, here, and was very successful in business. He held a number of honorable and trustworthy offices, and was widely known and highly esteemed throughout Lancaster County. For many years he enriched our Church-music with his good tenor voice, and was also one of the violinists.

792. Christian Henry Rauch. 3, l. xxii, 2. Nov. 22. Born in Lititz, July 19, 1788; a son of John Henry and Anna Christina (Stohler) Rauch. Married his first wife (m.n. Romig) in 1812. They had four sons and four daughters. His second wife, the widow Wickel, he married in 1850. His first occupation was that of a stocking-weaver; then he followed surveying and conveyancing, and from 1820 to 1860 he was a Justice of the Peace. As a musician he served the congregation with his violoncello and as a bass-singer and trombonist. He was all his life a steady reader, and fond of an occasional good novel. In 1810 he wrote a text-book on Arithmetic, Des Deutschen Bauers und Landmanns Rechenbuch, und des Schullehrers Gehülfe; printed in Easton by Christian Jacob Hütter. Candor was a distinguishing trait of his character.

793. Beatus Heiserman. Child of George Heiserman.

821. Fredericka Louisa Lindenlos. 2, l. xv, 12. Oct. 28. She was born in Amsterdam, June 10, 1793. Brought to America when she was about six years of age, and lived, first, with a Quaker family in Maryland, and later in York. Came to Lititz in 1815. Some mystery attaches to the circumstances which led to her coming to this country. Of her early childhood she had only a misty recollection; but she kept a distinct remembrance of a visit from a handsome, richly-dressed lady who gave her sweetmeats and wept over her; and there was a sea-faring man who, by his promise of some nice present, induced her to go with him to his ship. Whether she was thrown upon the world purposely, or kidnapped, this is certain, that her lines, subsequently, were cast in pleasant places, for here, with Samuel Sturgis' family, with the Petersens, and finally in the Sisters' House, she found a home, and everybody had a good word for old "Lindy."

1869.

822. Beatus Russel. 3, l. viii, 13. Jan. 12.

823. Beata Sturgis. 2, l. vii, 9. Jan. 15. Daughter of Nathan Sturgis.

889. John Beck. 3, l. xxii, 11. February 11. He was born June 16, 1791, at Graceham, Md., where his parents, the Rev. John Martin and Anna Johanna (Grubé) Beck were then stationed. Having been educated in Nazareth Hall, he was sent to Lititz in 1805, and here was apprenticed to Gottfried Traeger with whom he served his time as a shoemaker. In 1815 he was appointed to take charge of the village school for boys, from which humble beginning was evolved his famous Boarding School, the Lititz Academy—his own institution, not a church school—which was conducted by him, with great success and without personal or public solicitation, from 1819 until 1865. On the second of February, 1819, he married Joanna Augusta Reinke. At the Golden Anniversary of their wedding he gave a lovefeast, in the church, to the congregation and a dinner to his descendants and nearest friends at the Springs Hotel.

For his calling he was especially gifted; excelling as a teacher, it was a pleasure as well as an advantage to be taught by him, and to experience his influence for good was to many a boy a blessing. Of a cheerful disposition and a winning personality, simple-hearted and guileless, he had yet a remarkable sense of character, so that he could measure a boy almost as soon as he first saw him. Impartially faithful to his pupils, whether they were of high or low estate, bright or dull; scorning the use of sarcastic speech to a defenceless lad; readily giving his kind word of commendation when it was deserved, and bringing to the settlement of difficulties in discipline a superb degree of tact, he won the absolute confidence of his patrons and the lasting love of his boys. The whole number of his pupils during fifty years was 2326.

His activity, however, was not limited to his own educational routine: the public schools of the place and the adjacent country, the Sunday Schools here and elsewhere, claimed his attention always; and, ever appreciative of the beautiful, he planted, at his own expense, a great many of the trees that now yield their grateful shade in our Springs Park.

His long and useful life, through which he never failed to recognize his Heavenly Father's guidance, was perfectly rounded out by the voluntary assistance he gave, until within two weeks of his decease, in his son's private school for boys.

910. Catharine Thomas. 2, l. xix, 5. Dec. 27. She was born, in Philadelphia, June 7, 1797; a daughter of George William and Christiana Sheed. Baptized by Bishop White, in Christ Church. Three days after her birth her mother died; and after her father's death, in the following year, she was adopted by Samuel Grosh, of Lititz. For a time she served as a teacher in Linden Hall Seminary. Married to George David Thomas, Jan. 3, 1826.

911. Julius Theodore Beckler. 3, l. xxii, 13. March 8. Born June 26, 1814, at New Dorp, Staten Island, where his parents, the Rev. John Christian and Augusta Henrietta Beckler were then stationed. Educated in Nazareth Hall, and prepared for the ministry in the Theological Seminary at Nazareth, serving, later, as a professor in both institutions. In 1838 he married Emma Cornelia Smith, who died in 1853. He served in the pastorates of Bethania, N. C., and Emmaus, Pa.; and in 1846 was appointed Warden and assistant to the pastor in Lititz. On Oct. 12, 1854, he married Theodora Elizabeth Frueauff, and in the following year succeeded the Rev. Eugene Frueauff as Principal of Linden Hall Seminary, continuing in that position until June, 1862. During the impendence of civil war, and its first years of duration, the patronage of this school was, naturally, much diminished. Later he established a private school, here, for girls. Like his father, he was a good musician.

912. Walter Lincoln Seaber. 3, l. vii, 10. March 23. Infant son of Samuel and Lydia Seaber. Died suddenly, of croup, aged eight months.

967. Florence Matilda Miksch. 2, l. xv, 6. May 20. Born March 21, 1865; a daughter of James H. and Matilda (Kreiter) Miksch.

968. John C. Brickenstein. 3, l. xxi, 16. June 19. He was born Feb. 19, 1800, in the city of Basle, Switzerland, where his father was the pastor of a Moravian congregation. His early education was received from private teachers, mainly from an aunt. Having completed a classical course at Nisky, he studied in the Theological Seminary of Gnadenfeld, and then was called to America to be a teacher in Nazareth Hall, where he staid until 1830, acting also as one of the professors to three successive classes in the Theological Seminary. In that year he received an appointment as pastor of the congregation at Emmaus, and was married to Anna Sophia Albright. From 1835 he served the Nazareth congregation for two years, and then filled a like position in Bethlehem until 1850. After a residence of four years on a farm in Middlesex Co., Va., he removed to Nazareth. Here he gave instruction in the classical languages and French in Nazareth Hall, and also lectured on Church History to the theological class then occupying the Whitefield House. In May, 1880, he came to Lititz to live with his son Hermann, Principal at that time of Linden Hall Seminary, and there he departed. He was a man of brilliant, scholarly attainments, and an exceptionally efficient teacher.

969. General John Augustus Sutter. Entombed in the north-west corner of the graveyard. He was born in Kandern, Baden, Feb. 15, 1803. Graduated at the military school in Berne, Switzerland. Went to France and joined the army of Charles X. About 1830, he came to America and settled in the western part of Missouri. In 1837 he removed to New Mexico and established himself in Santa Fe; then to California, settling there on the banks of the Sacramento River, and founding a colony named by him New Helvetia. From the Mexican government he received 100,000 acres of land for services rendered, but lost the whole of it through the indifference of Congress toward his claims resulting from the annexation of California. In 1847 gold was discovered on his ranch in that state. In 1871 he came to live in Lititz and from here went often to Washington to urge his just claims, but always to be disappointed. Having paid to the State of California $30,000 in taxes on the land of which he was bereft, that State granted him a pension of $3,000 a year; but his ideas of right and wrong were so strict that after ten years, when he had had returned to him the former sum, he refused to accept the latter any longer. He died in Washington, D. C., June 18, 1880, aged seventy-seven years. Although he was not a member of this congregation the Church was proud to give him a resting-place in its burial-ground. Some fifty of his fellow-pioneers came to his funeral, and among them were Generals John C. Fremont and H. T. Gibson, both of whom addressed the multitude of people gathered about the grave. Here he was known as a fine-looking, courtly old gentleman, and, because of his urbane and hospitable ways, was esteemed and respected by the whole community.

Having been educated in the parish school he accepted a position in a mercantile house, but found it uncongenial to his tastes. Then, after four years of service as a clerk in the local magistrate's office, he entered the University of Erlangen in 1821, finished his studies in law, there, in 1824, and practiced his profession afterwards, very successfully, for six years in Nuremberg. Spiritually awakened by intercourse with one of the Brethren, a missionary of the Diaspora, he determined to devote his life to the service of the Church; and, closing his office in Nuremberg, he re-entered the university to study theology. After teaching in the schools of Gnadau and Neuwied, and engaging in pastoral and missionary labors in Basle, he accepted an appointment to enter the newly-organized Home Mission activity of our Church in this country. He was the first Home Missionary in our Province, his initial station being Philadelphia. In 1849 he was sent to Green Bay, Wisconsin, where he founded a flourishing congregation, but in consequence of increasing deafness was obliged to retire from that and other active service in 1863. In 1851 he had married Adeline Maria Greider, of Lititz, and to this place they now retired.

1024. Francis William Christ. 3, l. xx, 9. April 27. Born in Lititz, a son of Christian and Anna Julianna Christ (daughter of Peter Christ), Feb. 29, 1816. At the age of fifteen he was apprenticed to Jacob Greider with whom he served his time at shoemaking. In 1844 he married Sarah Ann Kraemer. Their three children died in early youth. Immediately after his marriage he and his wife assumed charge of the household department of John Beck's Academy; and there he devoted his time and energy to the material and spiritual welfare of the older boys of that institution. Deeply interested also in the young men of the congregation, he was appointed a deacon to have them under his especial care; and it is likely that this—amid much and varied usefulness to the community— was his greatest service. From 1855 until his death he was actively engaged in the Moravian Sunday School: first as its librarian, then as a teacher, and finally as the Assistant Superintendent. He served for many years as a member of the Board of Trustees; also, as the chief sacristan in the church. He received his fine education in the Lititz Academy, in Nazareth Hall, and in the Moravian Theological Seminary. After some years of employment as a clerk in the stores of Senseman, in Nazareth, and Pfohl, in Salem, N. C., he came to Lititz and here accepted a like position with his uncle, Jacob Tshudy; afterwards entering into partnership with him, and later with his son. When the Lititz Deposit Bank was organized he became its cashier; and with the establishment of the Lititz National Bank he received the same appointment, keeping it until his death. In 1873 he was married to Mary S. Lichtenthaeler. They had three children—one daughter and two sons; both of whom—the Revs. Louis and Robert Huebener—are now serving the Church. As a musician, he was a member of the Lititz Philharmonic Society, and in the church-music he played the flute and bass-trombone. After the death of his mother, when he was about four years old, he was adopted by Christian and Magdalena Miksch, and when they accepted a call to the Indian Mission, in Canada, he was transferred to the care of Henry Blickensderfer with whom he learned cigar-making until he was apprenticed to Charles H. Kryder, of Warwick, to learn tailoring. Having employed his leisure time in study under the instruction of his brother John, his services as a teacher were secured for the Lititz Academy, in which institution he taught the higher classes from 1840 to 1865, when, upon John Beck's relinquishment of the school, he became one of its principals, in partnership with George W. Hepp, continuing as such until 1881. His first marriage was to Emma E. Wolle, a daughter of the Rev. Peter Wolle, who died in 1866; his second marriage was to Elvira C. Dysart. Although of a diffident manner and retiring disposition, he was a man of refined artistic tastes, standing high in his profession and valued in the community. He had also considerable experience as a scrivener and a surveyor, and as an architect he was the designer of the Lititz Moravian Chapel. Some of the best tombstone work on our graveyard was sculptured by him. Two daughters, of his first marriage, survived him.

After he had received his education in John Beck's Litiz Academy, he learned the blackmith's trade of his father and then worked at the same for some time in Allentown. Returned to Lititz, he entered into partnership with his brother, Harrison, (1857) in the carriage-making business, his own department being the smithy. In 1858 he married Amanda C. Kraemer. He served the community efficiently on the School Board and in the Borough Council, and was for twelve years a Trustee and for more than twenty years the Chief Sacristan of the Moravian congregation. Until the last few months of his life he was a man of perfect health, abounding spirits, and high good humor; of large frame and powerful build; "and the muscles of his brawny arms were strong as iron bands." His death, deplored by every one, resulted from a stricture of the esophagus. Three sons and two daughters, with their mother, survived him.

Schneebeli, Harrison C. Lueders, and Rev. O. E. Reidenbach; Associate Member, O. L. Fehr.

The Society now numbers one hundred one life-members, and two hundred thirty-four active and associate members, making a total of three hundred thirty-five.

Obituary.

MARY HELEN SCHROPP LEOSER.

Mrs. Leoser was the second daughter of Abraham S. and Caroline S. (Guetter) Schropp and was born in Bethlehem on August 25th, 1868. She attended the Moravian Parochial School there until 1882 when she entered Linden Hall Seminary at Lititz, where she was a pupil until Christmas of 1884.

She took an active interest in church work and was one of the first teachers in the Laurel Street Sunday School.

On January 13, 1892, she was married to Thomas Smith Leoser, of New York City, residing in Elizabeth, N. J., until 1902. Three children were born to them; Thomas S., Jr., John and Ruth, the daughter, however, dying when 16 months old.

For the last year and a half, she with her boys resided in Bethlehem.

She departed on November 10, 1903, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Philadelphia, after having undergone the trial of a severe surgical operation, aged 35 years, 2 months and 15 days.

She joined the Historical Society in September, 1886.

LEWIS PHILIP CLEWELL.

The Rev. Lewis Philip Clewell was born at Schoeneck, Pa., February 9, 1843, and departed hence on January 9, 1904.

His parents were Philip G. and Anna Maria (Roth) Clewell. He was married, May 16, 1867, to Miss Sarah M. Blickensderfer of Gnadenhütten, Ohio, who survives him with their three children, the Rev. Robert E. Clewell, pastor of the congregation at Hopedale, Pa., and Mary Elvina and Addie Louisa.

His mother was a direct descendant of the Rev. John Roth, who was in active service as a Moravian missionary at Nain and Wyalusing, Pa., and Gnadenhütten, Ohio, and was later pastor in various Moravian congregations, dying at York, Pa., in 1790. Bro. Clewell studied for several years in the Theological Seminary at Bethlehem, Pa., was a teacher in Nazareth Hall for a year and was ordained a Deacon of the Church, November 19, 1865, by Bishop Samuel Reinke at Bethlehem; his ordination as Presbyter he received at Lititz, May 30, 1867, at the hands of Bishop David Bigler.

His pastorates were at Moravia, Iowa—1865-1866; Gracehill, Iowa, to April, 1869; Harmony, Iowa, to September, 1873; Graceham, Md., to June, 1880; Lebanon, Pa., to June, 1882; Emmaus, Pa., to December, 1889; Utica, N. Y., to Nov. 1893; Schoeneck, Pa., to November, 1894, and finally South Bethlehem, until he entered into his rest. He served his Church as teacher and pastor for forty years; his service in the ministry was marked by practical work in church extension.

In his time he organized five congregations, built seven churches and three parsonages, besides working actively at remodeling four churches and three parsonages—a record seldom equalled.

In the summer of 1863 he enlisted in the 34th Regiment of Pennsylvania Militia, in response to call of Gov. Curtin for volunteers to defend the State against invasion by the Southern Army. He later became a member of the G. A. R., and was chaplain of Robert Oldham Post of South Bethlehem.

He officiated in church services for the last time on New Year's Eve, notwithstanding suffering from a severe cold; on the morning of the second he became seriously ill, a dangerous case of pneumonia having developed.

Human skill and loving care proved unavailing to check the progress of the disease and, in the morning of the ninth day of the year, he fell asleep, at the age of nearly 61 years.

Bro. Clewell became a member of the Moravian Historical Society in September, 1896.

CORNELIUS WILLIAM KRAUSE.

One of the original members of the Moravian Historical Society, Mr. Krause always took an active interest in its affairs since its founding, in 1858.

He was born at Bethlehem, Pa., July 15, 1837, and was the youngest of the ten children of John and Elizabeth (Beitel) Krause. After having attended the Bethlehem Moravian Parochial School, he entered the employ of Aug. Wolle & Co. and finally became a member of the succeeding firm of Wolle, Krause & Erwin. Later he had charge of the South Bethlehem branch store of the Moravian Publication Concern, until this department was discontinued, during the last decade of the last century.

For thirty-seven years he was active as Sacristan of the Bethlehem Moravian Church. In 1863 he was wedded to Jane E. Roepper, who, together with their three sons, Arthur C., G. Fred. and Paul T., survive him.

His death occurred on April 2, 1904.

JAMES STOUT DODSON.

Mr. Dodson, whose death occurred on May 31, 1904, was born at Wheeling, W. Va., October 15, 1860, and was the only child of the late Adams and Henrietta Eoff Dodson; being a grandson of Dr. Eoff, a prominent physician of that State.

He came to Bethlehem at the age of 17 years and pursued a course of study in Lehigh University, being enrolled in the class of 1882.

He married Miss Martha Snyder, a daughter of the late Mifflin H. Snyder, of Bethlehem, in April of 1891, who with their son, Adams Dodson, survives him.

He was not actively engaged in business, though being of a mechanical bent he spent much time in his finely appointed workshop; he was fond of good reading and of the study of nature and, with rod and gun made many long excursions. He was the chairman of the Committee on Tablets and Memorial Stones in connection with the Sesqui-centennial celebration of Bethlehem.

Genial and courteous, he made many friends and his early death was greatly regretted.

He was a member of the Historical Society since October, 1892.

JOSEPH MATTHIAS LEIBERT.

Joseph M. Leibert, one of the original members of the Moravian Historical Society, departed this life on September 1, 1904. He was born at Bethlehem, on the 28th of February, 1837, being a son of James and Mary Ann (Tshudy) Leibert. He began his business career as a clerk in the store of the late Jacob Rice. During the Civil War he responded to a call for volunteers for the Northern army, being mustered into service at Bethlehem, in Company C, 129th Regt. P. V., on August 12, 1862. After the battle of Fredericksburg, in which his regiment was engaged, he became seriously ill and was brought to his home, where skillful treatment and careful nursing saved his life; he never, however, recovered his former vigorous health.

Subsequently he entered the employ of the Lehigh Zinc Company, as assistant to his brother, Richard W. Leibert, who was at that time Assistant General Manager; on his brother's retirement, he succeeded him in that office.

He was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Bethlehem Moravian Congregation for nearly twenty-four years, and, in 1881, after the death of Ernst F. Bleck, the Treasurer of the Congregation, he was elected to this office, which he held for twenty-three years, taking a deep and intelligent interest in all that concerned the well-being of the Church. He gave much time and attention to the care and improvement of Nisky Hill Cemetery and gave generous support to, and took personal interest in various recent enterprises pertaining to church improvements.

Though carefully unostentatious, he was ever a liberal contributor to every charitable and benevolent undertaking, both of his own church and of the community.

He was in failing health for the last two years of his life, being confined to his house since March, 1904; his sufferings were often severe, but he bore them with remarkable courage and patience, until his final release on the morning of September 1.

HISTORICAL AND COMMEMORATIVE.

THE MEMORIAL OFFICE

IN HONOR OF THE MISSIONARY MARTYRS,

WHO FELL AT GNADENHUETTEN ON THE MAHONING, NOVEMBER 24th, 1755, CELEBRATED IN TRINITY EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH AND AT THE GRAVES OF THE MARTYRS AT LEHIGHTON PA., NOV. 24th, 1905.

The Annual Meeting of the Moravian Historical Society held in the Museum and Library of the Society in the Whitefield House at Nazareth, Pa., on Tuesday, September 19th, 1905, marked the close of the 48th and the opening of the 49th year of the Society's existence.

Commenting upon the near approach of the Jubilee Anniversary of the Society, the President, Bishop J. Mortimer Levering, in welcoming the members and guests to the annual "Vesper," proceeded to call attention to a number of significant anniversaries, which fell in the year 1905, closing the recital with these words:

> "Finally, among the sesqui-centennial associations of the present year, we recall that 1755 brought a heavy blow upon the flourishing work of the Moravian Church in this vicinity. It was the year in which the scourge of the French and Indian War fell upon the Lehigh Valley and other regions. The 24th of next November will be the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the melancholy destruction of the prosperous mission at Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning and the massacre of our missionaries at that place. How many have gone up to Lehighton to see the little monument which stands there to their memory?"

Before the assemblage adjourned this suggestion of the President of the Society was taken up, and on motion of the Rev. E. S. Wolle, Pastor of the Second Moravian Church in Philadelphia, it was resolved that the Executive Committee of the Society should arrange for the celebration of a proper memorial office, if possible, at the grave of the martyrs in the cemetery at Lehighton, Pa.

The history of the massacre will be found elsewhere in this pamphlet. Suffice it here to say, that after the dreadful calamity the charred and mutilated remains of the martyr missionaries, who had been shot, scalped and burned, were gathered together and interred in the God's Acre of the incipient settlement, which has since become the cemetery of the modern town of Lehighton. On December 10th, 1788, a memorial stone, laid flat after the manner of Moravian graves, was placed upon the spot, with this inscription:

"To the Memory of Gottlieb and Christina Anders with their child, Johanna;
Martin and Susanna Nitschmann;
Anna Catharina Sensemann;
Leonhard Gattermeyer;
Christian Fabricius, clerk;
George Schweigert; John Frederick
Lesly and Martin Presser, who lived in Gnadenhuetten unto the Lord, and lost their lives in a surprise
from Indian warriors,
November 24th, 1755.
Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints."

Through the efforts of Joseph Leibert, of Bethlehem, whose wife was a granddaughter of Martin and Susanna Nitschmann, on August 7th, 1848, another monument was erected at the head of this slab. The whole lot is enclosed with a neat guard-rail, and the cemetery authorities evidently take pleasure in keeping it in good order. The presence of a marker of the Grand Army of the Republic on the lot would seem to indicate that this burial place of the soldiers of the Cross is decked with flowers on each Memorial Day together with the soldiers of the nation.

It was at this spot, that it was desired to celebrate a memorial office on the 150th anniversary of the destruction of Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning, a small stream that flows into the Lehigh River at the present town of Lehighton. Lehighton is 31 miles up the river, north-west from Bethlehem, Pa.

However, owing to the uncertainty of the weather at the end of November, it was deemed wiser to conduct the chief exercises under cover. Through the fraternal kindness of the proper authorities of the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church of Lehighton, their house of worship was secured for this purpose.

The Executive Committee of the Moravian Historical Society was scarcely prepared for the enthusiasm with which the suggestion of this celebration was taken up locally. An energetic local committee was appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen from Lehighton, Weissport and Mauch Chunk: District Attorney George E. Gray, Clarence S. Weiss, N. M. Balliet, the Hon. W. F. Biery, Dr. W. W. Reber, James I. Blakslee, Jr., John Seaboldt, G. W. Morthimer and Dr. B. S. Erwin. The arrangements made by them excited the admiration of the members of the Historical Society, especially as they had but very short notice that the celebration would actually take place. Both in Rex's jewelry store and in A. F. Diefenderfer's store an exhibition of a large number of colonial relics of the early settlements of the neighborhood had been arranged.

Could it have been known in advance what a beautiful Indian Summer day would be vouchsafed the celebration, it might easily have been held altogether at the cemetery, and that would have been well, as not even a fifth of the vast throng that gathered could be accommodated within the church. About sixty members of the Society attended the service, and for them seats had been reserved.

A printed Order of Service had been prepared by Bishop Levering, the hymns being taken for the most part from the regular Memorial Office in Honor of the Martyrs, the Easter Morning Service, and the Burial Liturgy of the Moravian Church. The Rev. Henry A. Jacobson, M.A., of Bethlehem, Pa., a member of the Executive Committee, presided at the organ. The services both in the church and at the grave were conducted by the President of the Society, Bishop Levering, of Bethlehem, Pa., likewise President of the Executive Board of the Northern Province of the Moravian Church in America.

After the singing of the opening hymn

> "Come let us join our friends above,
> That have obtained the prize."

words of salutation were spoken by the pastor of the church, the Rev. John H. Kuder, setting forth the significance of the occasion, and the joy of his people and himself in opening their church for such a purpose. Bishop Levering responded with apt words of acknowledgement, whereupon was sung the hymn,

"The Son of God goes forth to war
A kingly crown to gain,"

after which Revelation 7:9-17 was read as the Scripture Lesson by the Rev. E. S. Wolle, pastor of the Second Moravian Church in Philadelphia.

Again the vast congregation, which crowded every available space in the church, joined in singing the highly significant hymn:

"Triumphant martyrs! ye did fight,
And fighting ye did fall,"

and then Bishop Levering introduced the speaker of the occasion, selected by the President of the Society for eminently appropriate reasons, apart from his well known ability to handle such themes as the present occasion demanded, for, as the President pointed out, the speaker was a lineal descendant of one of the martyred missionaries. His grandmother, Rebecca Nitschmann Leibert, was a granddaughter of Martin Nitschmann, the first missionary to fall when the murderous attack was made upon the mission house. Furthermore he linked the past with the present, for when the mission work of Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning was destroyed a new mission for the Indians was founded under the same name of Gnadenhuetten on the Tuscarawas in Ohio. This mission, alas, likewise went down in fire and blood even more horribly than that on the Mahoning, for, in this case, cruel whites, blinded by unreasoning prejudice, butchered in cold blood the Indian converts. But now a new Gnadenhuetten has arisen amid those scenes and is the largest Moravian Church in Ohio, and the speaker is the pastor of the John Heckewelder Memorial Church in Gnadenhuetten, Ohio.

Thus introduced, the Rev. William Henry Rice, D.D., began his address by explaining that he could be the descendant of the martyred missionaries, because their children were being taken care of in the home settlement, while the parents were doing missionary work on the frontier.

His eloquent address appears elsewhere in this pamphlet, so that it would be superfluous to attempt a synopsis of it here. He held the closest attention of all as he sketched the causes which led to the massacre, characterized the devotion of the missionaries, emphasized their vicarious death, and drew patent lessons of their lives and deaths and applied them with telling force to the hearts of his auditors.

Immediately after the close of the memorial address, prayer was offered by the Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, of Bethlehem, Pa., Secretary of Missions of the Moravian Church in America.

The doxology

> "Then praise we God the Father > And praise we God the Son," was sung, and the Old Testament benediction pronounced by the pastor, the Rev. John H. Kuder.

As the great congregation reverently and orderly filed out of the church, the organist, the Rev. Henry A. Jacobson, played Spohr's "Blest are the departed."

For the march to the grave of the martyrs in the cemetery the procession was formed as follows:

1. The Local Committee.
2. The Visiting and Local Clergy.
3. The Descendants of the Missionaries.
4. The other Members of the Moravian Historical Society.
5. The Lehighton Cornet Band.
6. The Public School Children of Lehighton and Weissport.
7. The Citizens of Lehighton and Neighboring Towns.

As the procession moved from the church all the bells of Lehighton and Weissport were tolled until the cemetery was reached, and it had been arranged that the bells of all the Protestant Churches in Carbon County should be tolled at this hour, half past three in the afternoon.

The band played "Onward Christian Soldiers" until the gates of the cemetery, beautifully draped with the national flag, were entered, when it changed to a solemn and appropriate dirge.

When the historic spot was reached a sight met the eyes of the visitors that moved them deeply. The monument was enwreathed with graceful festoons of smilax intertwined with costly and exquisite roses. Around the base were artistically grouped potted palms. The flat slab was framed with beautiful chrysanthemums. All these flowers, as well as the beautiful decorations in the church, were presented as a gift of love by the florist, Paul Niehoff, of Lehighton, whose grandmother was a Nitschmann from Moravia.

As the procession approached the grave the ranks were opened to permit the school children, nine hundred strong, to march round the plot. Each one was provided with a carnation, sprig of evergreen, or flower of some kind, which was cast upon the mound as the bearer passed by, until the plot was covered with these tokens of loving remembrance. This was a most happily conceived and very impressive part of the ceremony, for which the credit is due the local committee. This is true of all the local arrangements.

The exercises at the grave were opened by singing the hymn from the Moravian Easter Morning Litany,

"The graves of all His saints Christ blest," and then the appropriate portions of the Moravian Burial Litany were prayed by the Rev. Morris W. Leibert, D.D., of New York City, Secretary of the Society for Propagating the Gospel, the congregation responding.

Another hymn from the Easter Morning Litany,

"These through fiery trials trod," was sung, and then, in response to the urgent request presented in the name of the many who could not find place in the church, the Rev. William Henry Rice, D.D., made some supplemental remarks. He read from the original German Diary, in which some of the martyrs were characterized, and emphazized the willingness of these noble men to serve in any and every capacity, interpreting all service of their fellowmen, however lowly, as service of the Lord.

Bishop Levering prayed the concluding portion of the Litany and pronounced the New Testament benediction, after the congregation had sung

"The Saviour's blood and righteousness
My beauty is, my glorious dress."

As the multitude dispersed, the band played "Nearer my God to Thee," then once more took up the refrain of "Onward Christian Soldiers," passing over into "Come hither, ye faithful, triumphantly sing," closing with a customary march.

Thus came to an end this most impressive celebration. Everything conspired to heighten its effect. The beautiful autumnal weather; the picturesque landscape, for beautiful for situation is the Lehighton cemetery looking out over the surrounding hills; the deep interest of the people; the fervid words of the speaker; the reverent choral singing; the appropriate instrumental music; all combined to produce what surely ought to be a lasting and precious memory.

So well planned was the program, that all the exercises, scheduled to begin at 1:30 P.M., were over in time for the visitors to leave with the regular 4:18 P.M. train. Through the courtesy of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company the noon express train had been ordered to stop at Lehighton for the accommodation of those coming from Bethlehem.

The number of those in attendance at the cemetery was variously estimated at from 3000 to 5000. As the total population of Lehighton and Weissport is barely 6000, many must have come from the surrounding country.

It will be interesting to place on record the names of the descendants of the missionaries, who were present at this celebration. The only actual martyrs, that is those who were really murdered in the mission house on that fateful night, who left descendants were: Martin Nitschmann, the first one to be slain; and Ann Catherine Sensemann, who was burned in the building.

Of the direct lineal descendants of Martin Nitschmann there were present: Eugene Martin Leibert, of Nazareth, Pa.; Richard W. Leibert; Joseph M. Leibert, Jr.; Eugenia Leibert Bishop; John Leibert Bishop; Emily Leibert and Joseph A. Rice, all of Bethlehem, Pa.; and William Henry Rice, of Gnadenhuetten, Ohio.

Of the descendants of Ann Catherine Sensemann there were present: Mrs. Albert Lindermann and her daughter Alberta Lindermann, of Philadelphia, Pa.

The missionaries on the premises at the time of the massacre, who escaped, were John George and Susanna Louisa Partsch, Joseph Sturgis and Peter Worbass.

Of the descendants of John Partsch there were present: J. Samuel Krause and Harry J. Meyers, of Bethlehem, Pa., and Mary Krause Henry, of Boulton, Pa.

Of the descendants of Joseph Sturgis there were present: James Orlando Sturgis, of Lititz, Pa., and Albert Orlando Sturgis and Albert James Sturgis, of Nazareth, Pa.

Sixteen in all.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

By the Rev. W. H. Rice, D.D.

Friends and Brethren:—You will allow me to express my appreciation of the considerate kindness which prompted the President of our Moravian Historical Society to invite me to come to Lehighton, to deliver the words of commemoration on this day, on which we have gathered to make sweet and tender memorial of the men and women of the Gnadenhuetten Indian Mission, who died the martyr's death on the dreadful Monday evening, one hundred and fifty years ago, the 24th November, 1755.

His kindly allusion to the fact of my kinship to some of the martyred heroes and heroines, prompts me to recall the fact that about fifty years ago, in the summer of 1858, it was my privilege to minister, day and night, to my maternal grandfather, Joseph Leibert, in his last illness, while at home during my college vacation. One August morning there came the stillness of death in the sick room in the home of his widowed daughter, Josephine Charlotte Leibert Rice, and he was not, for the Lord had taken his faithful disciple.

Just ten years before his departure, in August, 1848, he had seen his untiring efforts to set up a special memorial of the Gnadenhuetten martyrs, on this sacred spot, crowned with success. In these efforts he had the affectionate co-operation of his only son, the late James Leibert, that widely-known citizen of Bethlehem, who died in 1863, honored and beloved by all who knew him.

It would be a proud day for Joseph Leibert could he see the great concourse of the citizenship of Lehighton and Weissport and vicinity, paying this memorial tribute to the martyred dead of 1755.

In early manhood God gave him as wife and helpmeet, Rebecca Nitschmann, whose grandparents died here one hundred and fifty years ago. Her father was John Nitschmann, the four years old lad, in care of the church nursery at Nazareth, when his parents were murdered.

Rebecca Nitschmann Leibert was the light and gladness of her husband's home. Cheery and zestful in her household activities, wise and resolute in her counsellings, given to hospitality, she made his house a very sanctuary of family happiness, and of Christian sympathy and helpfulness for the neighbor and the fellow-disciple. When God took her, all too soon, he ever after walked in the twilight of sorrow. The memory of her loving devotion, in after years, inspired the grateful, if laborious task, to secure a more worthy memorial of her forebears' martyrdom.

I congratulate you, members of the Moravian Historical Society, citizens of Carbon County, and friends, upon this memorial demonstration. It honors the memory of a company of plain men and women who wrought and died at their post of duty, with a heroism equal to that of the soldier who gives up his life at his post of duty.

The Gnadenhuetten Indian Mission was begun in 1746, a little more than nine years before its destruction by the hostile Indians who sympathized with the French, in the struggle between that nation and the English for the mastery on this continent. In the intervening years it came to be the headquarters of missionary activity among the Indians, a flourishing community of Indian Christians.

At this period the Moravian Church was the only Protestant Church that carried on an organized effort for the Christianization of the Aborigines. In fact the Church made its chief work of evangelization.

Never since the days of the early Christian Church has such a work of evangelization been carried on with an organization so perfectly adapted and so wholly devoted to the end in view. As a consequence the record of the measure of the Moravian Church's success in the evangelization of the Red man has never been surpassed and scarcely equalled. Spirit-filled men and women, whose personal interests were swallowed up in their love for Christ and their consuming passion to win souls for the crucified Saviour, constituted the main body of workers—at home and in the field, under the leadership of those who were filled with apostolic grace and wisdom. They came from every walk and avocation in life, representatives of almost every European country; of one ship-load of colonists brought over from Europe, about this time, in a vessel owned and officered by the Church, it is recorded: A few were graduates of universities and theological seminaries; but the majority were bakers, blacksmiths, book-binders, carpenters and joiners, cloth-dressers, cutlers, farmers, a fringe and lace maker, a furrier, masons, shoemakers, stocking weavers, tailors and weavers." All were "awakened" men and women, whose sole object in coming to Pennsylvania was to help lead souls to Jesus Christ, the Saviour of men.

Thus equipped and thus led, the Moravian Church organization achieved amazing results in the work of the evangelization of the Indians. To-day her record is held up by all men as radiant with the light of Apostolic grace and power.

In these days it is no small distinction to be a member of the Moravian Church. Everywhere and by every one, in print and in speech, the Moravian Church is named only to be praised. It has not always been so. It was not thus, in this country, one hundred and fifty years ago.

I quote from the pages of Bishop Levin Theodore Reichel's "History of the American Moravian Church, 1734 to 1748."*

It is a quotation by that historian from the Documentary History of the State of New York, by E. B. O'Callaghan, Vol. III, p. 1022. It is taken from the official reply made by Governor Clinton, of the Province of New York, to the Board of Trade in England, in response to the latter's demand for an explanation of the reasons for the enactment of laws, by the Province Legislature, against the missionary work of the Moravian Church, among the Indians. It is dated May, 1746, the month and the year of the founding of this Gnadenhuetten Mission.

"The Count and his Moravian Brethren have by many Prudent People been lookt upon with a Jealous Eye ever Since his Arrival in these Parts. He is called a German Count, and as Many of his Countrymen have for several years Successively been imported into and Settled in Pensilvania Roman Catholics as well as Protestants Without Distinction, Where it Seems by the Indulgence of the Crown their Constitution granted by Charter, all Persuasions Roman Catholics as well as others are tollerated the free exercise of their Religion; the Increase of the People in that Colony has been so Great that they are computed to be Already much an Overbalance to the English subjects there; and from the Priviledge given them of Settling in Bodys by themselves they are like ever to Remain a Distinct People; and this seems to be their Aim, for they are fond of keeping up the (German) Language by Retaining Clergy, Schoolmasters and even Printers of their own Country and Language; nor as is creditably reputed will they Suffer any of their People to Intermarry with the English so that by these means and the Priviledges the Government of Pennsilvania Admits them to upon Importation, in Common with English Subjects, they may in a Short Time bear the Chief Say in the Government of that Colony, which from the aforegoing observations may Probably be attended with Dangerous Consequences not only to Pensilvania, But his Majesty's other Colonies in North America."

* Vol. III, Transactions of the Moravian Historical Society, pp. 210–215.

Listen! as Governor Clinton goes on to characterize "these" terrible "Moravians!"

"These Moravians have Compassed Sea and Land to make Proselytes and have so far Succeeded as to Gain in Pennsilvania, this and other Colonys; And the house at the Forks (in Northampton County) beforementioned, is the principal place of Rendezvous and Quarter of the Chiefs of them; 'tis kept according to Whitefield's Scheme as a Seminary for Converts and house of Support to their deluded Votaries, and many have Resorted thither; from thence they dispatch their Itinerant Emissarys, Teachers or Preachers, Simple, illiterate persons, who were wont to be content to busy themselves in their Native country in the Ordinary and humble Occupations they were bred to, viz: Bricklayers, Carpenters, Woolcombers, Taylors, and Such like Mechanical or handy-Craft Trades, till they were infatuated with a certain degree of Enthusiasm or Folly, Sufficient for Qualifying them for the plantation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; of whose Delusions, it seems, the Count has laid hold and thought them proper Tools to be Employed in his Service, perhaps with views unknown to these Creatures themselves, though at the same time they are forwarding his Schemes."

After reading the Governor's reasons, the following extract from the law enacted by the New York Colonial Assembly, September 21, 1744, entitled "An Act for Securing of his Majestie's Government of New York," may not surprise us:

"Be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid that no person or persons whatsoever shall take upon them to reside among the Indians under the pretense of bringing them over to the Christian Faith but such as shall be duly authorized so to do by License from the Governor or Commander-in-Chief for the time being, and with the advice and consent of the Council, and every Vagrant Preacher, Moravian, Disguised Papist or any other person presuming to reside among and teach the Indians without such License as aforesaid shall be taken up and treated as a person taking upon him to seduce the Indians from his Majestie's Interest and shall suffer such punishment as shall be inflicted by the Justice of the Supreme Court, not extending to Life and Limb."

"Provided that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to oblige the Ministers of the Dutch and French protestant reformed churches, the Presbyterian Ministers, Ministers of the Kirk of Scotland, the Lutheran, the Congregational Ministers, the Quakers and the Anabaptists to obtain Certificates for their several places of public worship already erected or that shall be hereafter erected within this Colony."

As Reichel points out: Under the stress of national antipathy and of worldly-mindedness, no one was ready to believe it possible that poor illiterate mechanics, in fellowship with graduates of European universities, should be eager to travel through forests and swamps in heat and cold for the only purpose of gaining souls for Christ.

These quotations will enable us to give the true historic setting to the events which we are assembled to commemorate. The Colonial Assembly of New York had by its enactments compelled the abandonment of the flourishing Indian Mission stations in the border counties of the provinces of New York and Connecticut. The persecutions of bad men who looked upon the spiritual work and success of the Moravian Brethren with an evil eye, seconded by the official harrassments which grew out of the above enactments, brought about the dispersion and exile of the Indian Christians in the Province of New York and adjacent parts; and at least one of that glorious band of Missionaries, the Apostolic Buettner, suffered martyrdom in his death from sickness brought on by the exposures incident to his legal persecutions.

The new mission station, at which the dispersed Indian Christians were rallied—Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning—was placed within the limits of the Pennsylvania Colony whose charter granted religious liberty and protection in the exercise of such freedom. Here were pitched "the Tents of Divine Grace."

But the times were troublous. The arts of peace never flourish in times of war. To carry on a gospel work amid such surroundings involved special perils.

The entire countryside of Eastern Pennsylvania was armed. All feared the Indians as a common foe. The story of continuous Indian murders and the threatened repetition of these outrages on a yet larger scale, inflamed the white settlers with terror and with feelings of revenge.

The Church and its work came to stand between the hostile savages and the colonists. No distinction was made between the savage and the Christianized Indian.

On the other hand the war-like Indians were bent upon seducing their converted brethren into the ranks of the warring savages. To the attainment of this end the missionary men and women presented the main obstacle.

It was indeed a hard place into which the followers of the Prince of Peace were led under a sense of devotion to the Lord and to the souls committed to their oversight and care.

But the Moravians of those days knew no other authority but that of the Master. When young Lesley, the only native born American among the Gnadenhuetten Missionary workers, was recovering from a severe spell of fever and ague, in the care of the brethren at Bethlehem, he begged to be permitted to resume his duties as foreman amongst the laborers at Gnadenhuetten. He was so persistent in his request that he was at last given leave, although still very weak. He resumed his place here at Gnadenhuetten only a few weeks before the massacre. When reminded of the imminent peril at this outer picket station,—for such in reality it had come to be, at the time when an attack by the hostile Indians was looked for at any hour of the day or night—he declared:

"I am not going to leave this place; I belong to Jesus and He is able to protect me. If He is willing to let anything happen to me, then I shall go home to be forever with him."

On the memorial stone that marks the grave of the martyrs are inscribed their names as men and women "who lived here (at Gnadenhuetten) unto the Lord."

When, some weeks before the massacre, word had been brought of the threatening incursions of the hostile Indians, the official record entered by the governing board at Bethlehem ran thus:

"If it must be so, it is better that a Brother should die at his post than to withdraw and have a single soul thus suffer loss!"

Truly a Spartan type of Christianity!

Within a week of the massacre, Brother Gattermeyer received a call to Gnadenhuetten, which he at once accepted with ready willingness.

Brother Schweigert, when the evil intent of the heathen Indian was made a subject of conversation, declared, within a few hours of the fateful Monday evening:

"Nothing contrary to my Saviour's will can happen to me. If he decrees to call me to himself in this wise, I shall be content."

He was "awakened" during his term of service in the army, some ten years earlier, before he came to America. It was Schweigert who helped the sisters in their flight into the upper story of the Mission Home, after the first attack of the savages.

With heroic self-possession he fastened down the trap-door, with whatever came to hand, and thus saved the fugitives from falling into the hands of their captives, a fate far worse than their death by fire.

Brother Presser received a call away from Gnadenhuetten to Gnadenthal, about a month before the massacre. He begged to be retained in the service here, and he thus gained the crown of martyrdom, dying at his post, a true soldier of the cross.

Of him, as of the others, the record says: His chief joy was to show kindness to the Indians, young and old." He was the carpenter of the settlement.

The spirit of loving service filled the hearts of these evangelists.

I have never read a more remarkable record of an all-purpose, all-around man than that of Gattermeyer. Born in Ratisbon, in South Germany, in 1721, he came to Pennsylvania, in the church-ship, the "Irene," in 1749. A blacksmith by trade, he developed a faculty for any and every department of labor in the field of the church's activity. "Before going to Heidelberg in 1752 to the pastoral charge of that post, he served as a helper to the mechanics, a sick-nurse, and for a good while as night-watchman."

"Oftentimes in the watches of the night his wakeful brethren caught the strains of his beautiful voice, telling of God's watch and ward of his people. He took a deep interest in the Indian work. His intercourse with them was characterized at once by manly steadiness and womanly tenderness. No labor was too much for him, only so that he could lend them a helpful hand.

"He was ready to scrub, to wash dishes, to sweep, to milk the cow, to cook, and then to preach, to lead in the liturgical services, to preside at conferences with the brethren and sisters, to encourage his fellow-workers; happy and contented under all circumstances, always cherishing a thankful spirit; with the dear Lord's comfort in his heart amid all perplexities and difficulties, loving in all his intercourse with others, resolutely prepared to enter upon any path of duty to which he was summoned—all these characteristics marked his constant service."

Of Fabricius, born on Fuenen Island, in 1716, the college graduate from Copenhagen, who belonged, subsequent to his awakening in 1748, to the first class formed in the Moravian Theological Seminary at Barby, in Prussia, we are told that he arrived in Pennsylvania, with seven other trained theologians, in the fall of 1753. He at once took hold of the educational work among the children. The following year he came here to Gnadenhuetten, to teach the Indian school children, and to learn the Delaware Indian tongue. He became absorbed in his work and was mightily drawn to his Indian brethren, and became almost like one of them, in his consuming zeal to serve them. Shot down in his attempt to escape from the burning Mission House, his body, scalped and mutilated, was laid to its grave rest yonder; a trained teacher of youth, who loved his calling and shrank from no peril in the performance of his duty. May his memory be cherished by the children of every succeeding generation. It is a fit tribute to him and to his fellow-missionaries, that the school-children of Lehighton have taken so prominent and earnest a part in the memorial services of to-day.

A fellow collegian, who for a while had been his co-laborer here, Christian Wedstedt, wrote an elegy in Latin, which has been placed in the record of those fateful days and reads thus:

GEORGE CHRISTIAN FABRICIUS.

Ah mi Frabrici, Jonathan mi, fide sodalis,
Tamque diu mihimet cognite, care, bone!
Audio cum lacrymis multis magnoque dolore
Vulnere cumque gravi vulnera magna tua.
Vulneribus mortis tantis affecte recurris
In mentem cuivis, qui tibi carus erat.
Non moreris; quid enim? tua vulnera vivera nomen
Quaeque jubent nobis, Frater amande, tuum,
Carus eras nobis, sed multo carior esse
Debes, qui Christo sanguine testis eras.
Oblitusque tui, jam gaudes Sanguine Sponsi
Qui amplexabatur, junctus amore tibi.
Osculor, et tibimet jam terque quaterque beato
Gratulor in Pleura.

Commemor esto
Chr. Wedstedtii.

Brother and Sister Anders came to Pennsylvania, in the "Little Strength," in 1743, the church ship that brought over the "Second Sea Congregation," or Colony, numbering one hundred and twenty persons. It was their "wedding journey," for they had just been married in May of that year on that memorable Herrnhaag wedding day when twenty-four young couples were joined in holy wedlock, before entering upon the service of the church in America. Both came to be members of the Moravian Church, some years preceding, because they had been "awakened."

They were very happy in their married life of a little more than ten years. God gave them four little children of whom one had been called home, two, Gottlieb and John, were in the care of the Church Nursery, at Nazareth, and the baby,—Johanna—lay in the loving arms of its mother, when parents and babe went to glory in the fiery chariot of this November day, 150 years ago.

"True as steel" are the closing words of the memoir of our brother's life and activity. Willing, sensible, tactful, untiring, are the words which characterize their testimony. He was drawn, in loving devotion, to the Indian, Christian and heathen, and knew "how to handle" them. His wife was a fit companion in all his labors. This young couple, united in their lives, were not separated in their death. "Buried in the fiery ashes" of the Gnadenhuetten martyrdom,—this was the high reward and honor that came to these devoted workers for Jesus, so runs the record of that day.

The same day's fiery martyrdom separated the Sensemans, husband and wife. Henry Joachim Senseman was married to Anna Catharine Ludwig, at Marienborn, in 1741. They were members of that pilgrim colony—"the First Sea-Congregation" —which reached Philadelphia, on June 7, 1742, on their way to Bethlehem. They served in the work of the first Indian Mission in New York, and were active in the work of the schools which had been established in that early day. They were appointed to the responsible Warden's office here, to assume charge of the secular business of the mission. They came in August, only a little more than three months before the massacre. Of their five children, the oldest and the youngest, a little boy and a little girl, had been called home to Jesus; they knew the other three, Gottlob, Joachim, and Anna Benigna, were in the loving care of the Church, enjoying a measure of that care which they had given to the children of other parents, while serving in the schools. On this day of death and separation, Sister Senseman suddenly laid aside her share of the common work at which the sisters were busily engaged, and crossed over to the Brethren's house where her husband lay sick. She came to give tender expression of her love. You and I can readily understand the sudden impulse that came into the woman's heart to look into his eyes and tell him how she loved him. It was a foreboding of the impending separation.

When the entire missionary family had taken their places at the supper-table, and Brother Anders had said grace, Brother Senseman remembered that he had forgotten to lock the door of the chapel. He left the family circle to attend to this neglect. In the brief interval the savages surrounded the Mission house and made his return impossible. Unarmed, all that was left him was to seek escape in flight.

Just befor Sister Partsch escaped by leaping from the window of the upper story of the burning Mission House, she heard Sister Senseman, who sat with folded hands, saying: "Dear Saviour, this is what I expected." By birth a member of the Roman Catholic Church, she had been "awakened," and from the first hour of her conversion to the last, she manifested the love and fidelity that spring from closest heart-communion with Jesus.

Brother Martin Nitschmann, the first one of the Mission Family to fall, shot to death, as he stood in the open door of their common home, across whose threshold these missionaries were wont to give a gospel welcome to Indians, whether converts or heathen, to white and brown neighbors and strangers, always ready to give shelter and food, whether they themselves had much or little—was a member of that family whose name has become a classic in the annals of that early period of our Church. In every department of the church's work the Nitschmanns made a record; they shared alike in the honors of highest official position and distinction, and in hardest labors and sacrifices of every plan, high and low. Bishops, martyrs, farmers,—awakened exiles, every one of them,—it is no strange thing that this name stands on the only record of martyrdom of white brethren and sisters, in the history of our American Moravian Church. Martin was born at Zauchtenthal, in the Kuhlaendl, in Moravia, the cradle of the pilgrim exiles that fled across the mountain border into Saxony, and who commanded, in God's providence, the erection of "the Watch of the Lord," glorious Herrnhut, a city of God whence have never ceased to flow forth the waters of Christ's eternal salvation! He was born on March 19, 1714. He reached Herrnhut, a youth of nineteen, in March, 1733. Here he learned the cutler's trade. Received as an Acolyte, at Herrnhaag in 1748, he came to America in 1749, a little more than six years before his martyrdom. On the same ship with him, the church-ship "Irene," came the two Bishops, David Nitschmann and John Nitschmann, Matthew Stach and Christian David, nomen venerabile!—"good old Christian David." But besides these came also among the single sisters, Sister Susanna Weicht. Martin and Susan were married at Bethlehem, in July, 1749, two months after their arrival. ("Er war ein stiller, fleissiger und brauchbarer Bruder, an dem man sich erbauen und erquicken konnte. Er hatte was Lammhaftes und gesetztes, war kindlich und friedlich unter seinen Geschwistern, priesterlich in seiner Ehe, liturgisch in seinem Umgang.") This characterization that cannot be satisfactorily rendered into English, tells of him as a quiet, industrious, useful member of the mission family, whose conduct constantly made for peace and truthful friendship, who loved and honored the wife whom God had given him, and who stood at all times for steadfast devotion to the Church of his fathers. It was a fitting honor that a Nitschmann should head the list of Gnadenhuetten martyrs.

To Susan Weicht Nitschmann, his faithful helpmeet, came the crowning distinction to suffer the Gethsemane depths of horrible captivity—a living death. Mated with a disciple who deemed the ties of matrimony holy, she the priestess and he the priest, at the family altar—she was suddenly thrust out into the bestial companionship of a ruthless savage, her Christian womanhood outraged in its holiest sensibilities. It was a grateful word that came to Bethlehem, months afterwards, that after the tortures of a prolonged martyrdom, not to be named in connection with death by fire or by the tomahawk, she was brought into the eternal sanctuary of peace and love. I am sure her Lord and Saviour led Susanna straight to where Martin stood, for reunion and eternal happiness.

Two little boys, John and Martin, were in the tender watch and care of the Church Nursery.

In the beautiful God's Acre at Nazareth there is a little grave, into which they laid little Martin's body soon after the massacre of his parents here at Gnadenhuetten.

John grew up to manhood, married and had a numerous family. Descendants of his sons and daughters are living in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and other parts of the land.

I have thus attempted to set forth the spirit in which these martyred men and women wrought in their service of Christ and their fellow men.

I am fresh from the sessions of the great Inter-Church Convention for Confederation, held during the past ten days in New York City. I have listened to the addresses of leading representatives of thirty-two (32) different evangelical Protestant Churches and eighteen millions (18,000,000) of American Christians. There was a wonderful unity of sentiment expressed in all these addresses and appeals. The one keynote was that for unity of evangelistic effort and the other was that for a Christianity of service and sacrifice.

The record with which this memorial service has to do is one rarely paralleled in the story of the Church of Jesus Christ, since the days of the Apostles and their immediate successors.

These Missionary men and women poured out their lives upon the altar of sacrifice unto the Lord and the brethren; they did indeed "live here for the Lord," and the Lord's lost ones. Their holy example is a rich heritage for every generation. Their burial place is a holy shrine for constant renewal of loving devotion to Christ and to Christ's lost ones.

I cannot close these memorial words without dwelling upon one more feature of significance in the events of that November evening in 1755, which we are met to commemorate.

The destruction of Gnadenhuetten, the outpost station, saved Bethlehem, the central station, from destruction either by the hostile whites or the hostile Indians. The men and women who stood at their post of service at Gnadenhuetten, until their lives were sacrificed, made that sacrifice for the larger circle of Moravian workers at Bethlehem. They died for their brethren! Pro Nobis! For us, in our behalf, in our stead, was the keynote of the Latin elegy already referred to.

This lends a sacred charm to the tragedy, that can only belong to it, from this fact of a vicarious sacrifice. As Lincoln said upon the field of Gettysburg, let us here at this holy shrine pray God to inspire us with a larger measure of devotion to duty in all service of Him, by day and by night, that, if the exigency arise, we may be willing and prepared to meet it and give even our lives for Christ and for them whom Christ died to save!

A few of us have been referred to as kindred by human ties to some. But, on this day of hallowed memories, we realize that by the blood of Christ we are all kin in the brotherhood of His divine sacrifice—that He alone is Master and we all be Brethren!

AN ACCOUNT OF THE MASSACRE AT GNADENHUETTEN, PA.

Before depicting the details of the cruel tragedy at Gnadenhuetten, Pa., which gave the death blow to this flourishing Indian mission, it will be fitting to give a brief statement of the causes which led to its establishment on the Mahoning by the Brethren's Church.

The successful labors of the Moravian missionaries at Shecomeco, N. Y., and at Wechquadnach and Pachgatgoch in Connecticut had come, perforce, to an untimely end through the persecutions of the self-sacrificing teachers at the hands of ignorant, jealous and unscrupulous neighbors.

It was found imperative to remove the Christianized Indians from their abodes in the beautiful Stissing valley and locate them on lands which they could call their own, and thus Bethlehem became the first place of refuge for those Mohicans and Wampanoags who were willing to accept the invitation hither.

This asylum on the banks of the Monocasy, aptly termed Friedenshuetten—the tents of Peace—was intended as a temporary abode only, for steps were at once taken to secure a tract of land beyond the Blue Mountains as a permanent home for the Indians and their teachers, the purchase being consummated in March, 1746.

This gateway in the main road of communication between the white settlers and the Indian regions of Nescopec, Wyoming and Tioga afforded to many an untutored savage from these upper regions the opportunity to hear the words of saving grace as spoken by the Moravian missionaries.

A saw and grist-mill was built on the Mahoning by the Brethren of Bethlehem in 1747, and many rafts of boards and sawed timber were floated down the Lehigh, when its waters, swollen by rains, afforded favorable transit to Bethlehem, and which were used in the erection of some of the massive stone buildings still standing on Church Street.

In 1750 the Moravians made a purchase of land on the other side of the Lehigh from Gnadenhuetten and to this spot the Indian cabins were removed in May, 1754. The mission buildings (the larger of which was built in 1749) were still made use of by the teachers and their families and by those who superintended the mill and farm work.

This transfer to the east side of the river was occasioned by the complaints of the Indian converts of the poor quality of soil on the Mahoning side as compared with the rich bottom lands on the east shore. There were restless and unstable spirits among them, too, who wavered between their promises to the Brethren and the insistent attempts of unfriendly and scheming savages who used every artifice to induce them to remove to Wyoming, and it was in order to keep a firm hold on their converts, for their own spiritual and temporal welfare, that this purchase and their transfer to New Gnadenhuetten was made.

This, therefore, was the situation when the Indian irruption upon the border settlements occurred in 1755—a score of Indian cabins occupied the present site of Weissport,while the mission buildings, mill and farm remained on the Mahoning.

The account of the massacre, following herewith, is taken from "A History of Bethlehem" and is compiled by the author, Bishop J. Mortimer Levering, from all the rich and varied sources afforded by the manuscript matter in the Church Archives at Bethlehem. The fact of its being presented from an objective rather than a subjective point of view would seem to be a special feature of interest in recounting this last act in the history of the Indian mission at Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning.

November 24 was a day of noise and confusion such as had never been experienced in Bethlehem, with sights that seemed very strange in its quiet streets. All day armed men marched through from different parts of New Jersey and some of the lower neighborhoods of Pennsylvania, on horseback and afoot, with drums and flags, intending to scour the woods in the direction of Gnadenhuetten in search of hostile Indians. It was hoped that some detachments of the murderous hordes might be encountered and repulsed, and their further advance thus be checked. David Zeisberger, with the knowledge of the militia captains, mounted a horse and started for Gnadenhuetten ahead of the rangers, to deliver Horsfield's message to Mack in reference to the desired convoy to Bethlehem, to inform the Indian congregation of this expedition and instruct them to remain quietly in their houses, so that they would not be found outside in the woods and mistaken for savages. He was stopped on the way by a company of excited Irishmen, who took it for granted that he was bound for the hostile camps to give the alarm to the "French Indians" and frustrate the purposes of the militiamen, and thought that they had at last caught one of the Moravian traitors in the very act. Zeisberger's coolness and tact, which seemed never to forsake him in any emergency, together with that impressive power of conscious innocence which often turns the sentiments, even of the most bitter and excited men, served him well, as it had before and later did in far more critical straits. He was finally permitted to ride on, but the detention involved great peril for the Indian congregation.

Evening was coming when he reached the mission. Having delivered his letters to Mack, he immediately turned his course to the river, to cross before it became quite dark, intending to rest over night at the establishment on the Mahoning, on the other side, after delivering his message there. He had heard gun-shots west of the river as he approached the mission, but did not suspect anything amiss, for, with squads of militia now traversing the woods and occasionally firing signals to other bands this was not a particularly startling sound that day. Suddenly a piteous cry from the other shore came to the missionaries on the east side who had just taken leave of Zeisberger. Shebosh instantly pushed a canoe into the water and directly returned, bringing Joachim Sensemann and George Partsch, with the horrible tidings that the savages had fallen upon the settlement and, as they supposed, murdered the rest of the household. Then the rising flames began to light up the gloaming with a sickening evidence of the fiendish work that was being done. Zeisberger had meanwhile slowly made his way to the ford, and was crossing the stream. The nearer noise of the splashing water and the crack of the stones under his horse's hoofs prevented him from hearing the shooting and yelling of the savages, broken by the thick underbrush of the river-bank and the bluff beyond, which also concealed from him the light of the starting flames. Mack called to him several times at the top of his voice, but did not succeed in attracting his attention until he had reached the other side. A moment he paused and with dismay took in the awful situation, just as young Joseph Sturgis, who had escaped with a slight wound on his face, rushed gasping down to the river. Turning about, he forded back to the east side. There a consultation was held in the anxious suspense of the hour. The Indians, who gathered about Martin Mack in terror asking what they should do—many of the younger men were yet off on their fall hunt—were advised by him to quietly disperse and conceal themselves in the thick woods; for it was taken for granted that an attack upon the buildings on that side would soon follow. Sturgis had slipped away into the forest.

Zeisberger gathered what particulars could be given him by Sensemann and Partsch, and, with these and Mack's official message, set out in the darkness to make his way with all the speed his tired horse could command, back to Bethlehem. His dreary midnight ride was broken by a brief interview with some of the militia rangers of the previous day whom he met on the road. He told them what had taken place, and their first impression was expressed in the declaration that this appalling fate of the Moravians at Gnadenhuetten proved their innocence of complicity with the savages in the interest of the French. Thus he could carry back, with his tale of woe, also the first evidence of good to come out of this great evil. He had not many details to report. The household of sixteen persons, fifteen adults and one infant, excepting two who were not well—Senseman's wife, who had remained in the room set apart for the women, and Peter Worbas, single, who was in another building in which the unmarried men had their quarters—were gathered at the table in the general dwelling and guest-house, partaking of their evening meal. The barking of the dogs and a sound as of persons approaching the premises, led Sensemann, who was steward, to go out for the purpose of locking the doors of the main building in which the chapel was, and making things secure for the night. He saw no one, and entered the building. Hardly had he struck a light, when he heard a loud report of firearms. He, like Zeisberger, thought the shooting was done by a company of militia who had passed several hours before, and were expected to spend the night there, and paid no attention to it. Having locked the door, he started to return to where the others were, when he was met by Partsch, who announced that Indians had rushed upon the house and were shooting at the inmates, and that he had escaped through a window. Sensemann proposed that they make an effort to rescue the women, and they turned towards the house, but it was entirely surrounded by the savage troop and they, being unarmed, could do nothing more than make their escape and sound an alarm at the mission, east of the Lehigh. The setting fire to the house followed after they fled and the presumption with which Zeisberger started for Bethlehem was that all, excepting these two men and young Joseph Sturgis, whom he had seen, had perished by the bullets or tomahawks of the murderers or in the flames. At three o'clock on the morning of the 25th he reached Bethlehem, aroused Bishop Spangenberg and told him the horrible story. Whether any others were immediately informed of it does not appear in the narrative. A messenger was sent to Parsons at Easton about two hours later.

In the early dawn of that sad November morning the people of Bethlehem were summoned, by the ringing of the bell, to morning prayer as usual, this being the first thing each day. Spangenberg had, according to his custom, opened the book of daily texts to see what the watchword of the day was, and he found a peculiar significance in it that gave him a starting-point from which to begin the service and the morning words to the people in the usual manner, preparatory to breaking the mournful news. "Joseph.....made himself strange unto them and spake roughly unto them." As his brethren, not recognizing him under the temporary disguise of this harsh exterior, said to Jacob their father, "the man spake roughly unto us." Thus, said Spangenberg, our Lord sometimes deals roughly with us and makes Himself strange, but we know His heart. A peculiar impression was felt—an apprehension of something momentous —as he looked about the congregation, and his voice quivered with pent-up emotion. Then the announcement of the tragedy was made and tearful supplications went up to the darkly veiled throne of grace. Many a one's early meal was left untouched in Bethlehem that morning, and the day was one of mourning. Another thing Spangenberg said at that morning service: "Our neighborhood can now see that the Brethren are not allied with the French, for we have been in such danger for several days of being fallen upon by a mob that they have quite openly said, 'before we move upon the enemy, we must not leave one stone upon another in Bethlehem.' The Justice, our Brother Horsfield, has been a real martyr, for he could not convince all of the people that our remaining so quiet in the midst of the tumult that fills the whole land did not signify that we had an understanding with French."

Those slain on the Mahoning were verily martyrs, destined, in the mysterious ways of God, "who made Himself strange unto them and spake roughly unto them," to bear the convicting testimony to men who refused to be convinced by lesser proof. In some sense and degree, their blood was vicarious blood. It had to wash out the cruel calumny which excited prejudice, incapable of understanding the Moravians, persisted in writing on the bulletin board of public sensation, and it became the sprinkled blood on the lintels and door-posts of Bethlehem to stay the destroying hand of men, maddened by the fiendish atrocities perpetrated upon their homes, who might otherwise have taken vengeance upon the Moravians, as friends of the Indians. When the murderous hand of the savages was to be lifted against Bethlehem, God stayed that hand, for He had chosen the place as a city of refuge to which many who escaped might flee from the fields, where one was taken and another left. The most obtuse mind could be expected to comprehend, when the massacre on the Mahoning became known, that the savages would not fall upon those who were secretly working with them and murder them. They thus took revenge upon the Moravians for standing in their way with that settlement at the mountain gate-way, and foiling their attempts to secure the co-operation of those converts. After this, the repetition of the old slander—and, although common opinion among suspecting masses was suddenly and powerfully changed, it was repeated by some, even after this—could no longer be charitably ascribed to mere ignorance about the Moravians. It now became criminal malice.

In the course of the day, on the 25th of November, one after another arrived from the scene of carnage, like the messengers of Job coming in to tell of the ruin wrought where Satan's hand was permitted to fall. From one after the other, further particulars were learned. About seven o'clock the first fugitive arrived; Peter Worbas, who at first had watched the horrible scenes from the room of the single men in another building. Although ill, he had trudged the long distance to Bethlehem afoot. He could not tell much more than was known. He saw one of the women flee to the cellar, outside the house, and back into the "sisters' room," pursued by a savage with uplifted tomahawk. He heard the heart-rending screams of an infant amid the crackling of the flames. For some time he was a prisoner, a guard being posted at the door. A shout from the other savages diverting the attention of his guard, he leaped from the window towards the Mahoning and fled. On the way to Bethlehem he heard of the escape of Sturgis. Anton Schmidt and Marcus Kiefer, who, at Shamokin, had become veterans in facing the dangers of savage surroundings, were soon dispatched to Gnadenhuetten to ascertain how matters stood there, and to take a message from Justice Horsefield to the militia gathered at that point, stating that provisions would be sent them if needed. Spangenberg, meanwhile, went to Nazareth to make the sorrowful announcement there, and institute the first steps towards guarding against a surprise by the savages. There, when he undertook to speak again of what had taken place, his composure forsook him. He broke down under the strain and for a while could only weep.

In the afternoon Sensemann came, bringing about thirty of the Gnadenhuetten Indians, all completely exhausted by their hard experiences. While making his way through the woods towards Bethlehem, he came upon this little band cowering in their place of concealment, and brought them along. All that Sensemann could relate was already known through Zeisberger.

Later in the day Martin Mack arrived with his wife, Grube and his wife, Schmick and Joseph Powell and his wife, who had been temporarily at the station on the east side, and more of the fugitive Indians. Mack was almost broken-hearted. Gnadenhuetten had been very dear to him. He had devoted himself to that mission from the beginning with all his heart, and he felt as a father towards the converts who were singularly attached to him. The colony of men and women who occupied the original buildings on the west side of the river had trusted his counsel and leadership when the time of peril came. He had encouraged them to stand quietly and manfully at their post. They had done so, and now they had fallen at that post, and he was spared. He was overwhelmed with sorrow. The entire Indian congregation of seventy persons gradually found their way to Bethlehem. Here they were sheltered in the "Indian house" and were cared for, regardless of the risk their presence might entail upon Bethlehem when the unreasoning excitement of some in whose eyes all Indians were alike, was stirred anew by the discovery that they were housed there. It put a strain even upon the confidence and good will of some of the Bethlehem people, under the poignant grief they felt for the awful fate that had befallen their brethren and sisters on the Mahoning; all on account of Indians and at the hands of Indians; and under the growing dread of an attack upon Bethlehem, which might the more quickly be provoked by the presence of these people whom the savages were now bent upon killing, since they could not entice them. It even became necessary for Spangenberg, a few weeks later, to plead with such openly, to not permit aversion and bitterness to possess their hearts towards these poor creatures snatched as a brand from the burning; the remaining fruit of many labors, prayers and tears.

In the afternoon of November 26, Partsch and his wife Susanna reached Bethlehem. It was not known whether he had escaped or not, after he and Sensemann parted, and his wife was supposed to be, of course, among the victims. Young Sturgis came with them. They brought the fullest details of the horrible massacre. After Sensemann had gone out to lock the door, as related by him, the barking of the dogs increased and footsteps were heard about the house. Sturgis, followed by several of the other men, arose from the table and opened the door, supposing that the expected militia men were coming. There, before the door, stood some of the murderous savages, ready for the attack. Instantly they fired, and Martin Nitschmann fell dead, while a bullet grazed the face of Joseph Sturgis, who was nearest to the door. Another volley quickly followed and John Lesley, John Gattermeyer and Martin Presser fell. Presser, as was discovered some months later, was not instantly killed, but was able to creep from the house and find his way to the woods nearby, where he succumbed to his wound.

Martin Nitschmann's wife, Susanna, was next wounded by a ball. She was seen to fall and her cry, "O brethren! brethren! help me!" was heard. That was the last then known of her, and it was supposed that she had perished by a tomahawk or in the flames. She was evidently dragged out of the house when the remaining inmates fled to the garret, and, as was afterwards learned, she was taken captive by the murderers.

Those who succeeded in reaching the dormitory in the garret closed and secured the trap-door, so that their pursuers could not force it open. This remnant of the household were Gottlieb Anders, his wife, Johanna Christina, and their infant daughter, Johanna; Susanna Louisa, wife of George Partsch; Anna Catharine, wife of Joachim Sensemann; George Christian Fabricius, George Schweigert and Joseph Sturgis. Senseman's wife sank down upon the edge of a bed and simply exclaimed, "Dear Saviour, this is what I expected!" The wife of Anders, with her wailing infant wrapped in her apron and clasped to her heart, expressed only a mother's anguish for her child. There they passed an awful quarter of an hour, listening to the yells of the savage troop and the shots fired at random through the window, the roof and the floor. One and another of the prisoners screamed for help at intervals, in the faint hope that rescuers might approach and hear that they were yet alive. Then there was a lull in the shooting; the yells ceased for a brief space, and no one was seen by those who peered out of the garret window. For the moment the attention of the demons was absorbed in their final most fiendish plan. Soon the crackling of the flames told the victims what they might now expect. Sturgis seized this opportunity to leap from the window, landed safely and got away. Susanna Partsch immediately followed him and also escaped. The third and last to make the attempt was Fabricius, as appeared from the discoveries made the next day. The window was now again watched, and he did not escape. The remaining four with the little child evidently perished in the flames.

Susanna Partsch was unfamiliar with the surroundings, having been at the place a week only and did not know which way to take in the darkness. She secreted herself for some time behind a tree, at an elevated spot near the main building, where she could watch the movements of the murderers. She saw them set fire to one building after another; first the barn, then the kitchen and bakery, then the single men's dwelling, after that the store and last of all, with some difficulty, the main building containing the chapel—the Gemeinhaus. The store was first looted, then all eatables found in kitchen, bakery and spring-house were collected and the savages had a feast by the light of the conflagration. There were estimated to be about twelve of them. About midnight, as nearly as the trembling watcher could judge, they gathered up the plunder secured in the store and set out towards Wyoming. Then this almost distracted woman, left alone at the desolate place, made her way down to the river where she came to a large hollow tree within which she took refuge until daylight, when rescuers arrived.

Partsch had found his way during the night to a house in the Blue Mountains, where he fell in with Sturgis. Early in the morning they returned to the Mahoning with some rangers. He was nerved by a presentiment that his wife had escaped. When they got across the Lehigh, they suddenly came upon her, crouched in her place of concealment, almost benumbed with cold and fright. They went on to explore the scene of desolation. All the buildings were burned down, and the charred remains of some who had there perished could be seen but not distinguished. Outside, in the square, they came upon the body of Fabricius, pierced with bullets, scalped and mutilated, and watched over by the only living friend that remained at the spot, his dog. The savages, after finishing their atrocious work, left a blanket with a hat and knife stuck through them on a stump, as a defiant warning of more of the like to follow. Exhausted and sickened, Partsch and his wife and Sturgis set out on their sorrowful journey to Bethlehem.

Amid the deserted cabins on the east side, only Shebosh remained a while to watch for any members of the Indian congregation who might yet be hiding near-by and, seeing him there, might venture to approach. On November 27, Anton Schmidt returned from the Mahoning where, with the assistance of some neighbors, he had hastily made a coffin in which he placed the body of Fabricius, with such charred remains of the others as he could collect, and buried it in a corner of the garden, where the little cemetery of the place had been opened.

The foregoing narrative is compiled from a careful collation of all exant original occounts, correcting inaccuracies of some of the many printed accounts, supplying some points lacking in others, and giving all the authentic particulars that would be found by examining all of them. This massacre ended Indian mission work there. The place lay neglected until 1771, when it became the center of a white congregation, composed of members of the two defunct congregations, Allemaengel and Sichem, Duchess County, N. Y., the region of the original Indian mission which furnished the nucleus of Gnadenhuetten in 1746. In 1783 the first recorded formal attention was paid to the grave of these martyrs, when that white congregation gathered around it to observe the Easter matins. In 1786, the Rev. John Frederick Moehring, minister there, addressed the executive authorities at Bethlehem in reference to placing a memorial stone on the spot—a thing spoken of before. Finally, on December 10, 1788, the slab that yet lies there, with its simple but impressive inscription was placed on the grave. The monument at the head of it was provided through the exertions of descendants of Martin and Susanna Nitschmann, and set in place, August 7, 1848, the centennial anniversary of the first Indian interment at Gnadenhuetten. The credit for again rescuing the sacred spot from oblivion, more than thirty years after the dissolution of the white congregation of Gnadenhuetten, belongs mainly to the late Joseph Leibert, of Bethlehem, whose wife was a granddaughter of the Nitschmanns.

MEMOIRS OF THE MARTYRS.

ANNA CATHARINE SENSEMAN,

whose maiden name was Ludwig, was born October 20, 1717, at Lichtewarn, Upper Silesia, of Roman Catholic parentage, in which church she received her first religious instruction. At the age of 15 years she became concerned for her soul's salvation and suffered persecution in consequence, being threatened even with imprisonment. Without the consent of her parents she made her way to Herrnhut where she hoped to find peace for her soul and here she was, in course of time, received as a church member.

On August 5, 1741, she was married to Joachim Senseman, at Marienborn; in November of the same year they received a call to assist in the work of the Brethren in Pennsylvania, and in June, 1742, they arrived in Philadelphia, members of the "First Sea Congregation."

In January, 1743, they were dispatched by Count Zinzendorf, at that time in Philadelphia, to their first mission station, Shecomeco, in the colony of New York, where they spent two years among the Mohican Indians living there. In 1752 they entered on their duties as missionaries at Pachgatgoch, Conn., where she proved herself a faithful help and comforter to the Indian sisters in particular.

In 1754 they had the management of the school at Macungie, and in August of the fateful year, 1755, were transferred to the Mission on the Mahoning. Of their five children, three, Gottlob, Joachim and Anna Benigna survived their mother.

GOTTLIEB ANDERS.

Gottlieb Anders was born in 1717, at Neumark, Silesia, his parents being Lutherans. Having learned the profession of gardening, he worked with the Brethren at Herrnhut and successively at Herrndyk and Herrnhaag. At the latter place he was received into church fellowship on May 26, 1743, and, on the following day, was married to Johanna Christina Vollmer.

During the same year they went to America with the "Second Sea Congregation," reaching Bethlehem in November.

For ten years they lived at Nazareth, where he took a kindly interest in the welfare of the Indians who were still living in the neighborhood, and was patient and untiring in administering to the wants of these as well as of such visiting Indians who happened to lodge there, frequently comforting such as were sick, so that he was generally known and beloved by the aborigines in this vicinity. In everything that he undertook to perform he was punctual and reliable, proving himself "true as steel."

During the year 1755 they were transferred to Gnadenhuetten, where he served as Chaplain and closed his career as a martyr in the service of his Lord and Master.

JOHANNA CHRISTINA ANDERS

was born December 3, 1720, in Homburg; her maiden name was Vollmer. At the age of 20 years, she received her parents' permission to join the Brethren's Church at Herrndyk, and she was received in church communion in November, 1741. She was united in marriage with Gottlieb Anders in 1743, accompanied him to America and proved a true helpmeet to him and a loving mother to their four children, of whom, the youngest, was privileged to suffer a martyr's death with her parents. The infant was aged one year and two months. They were survived by two sons, Gottlieb and John, who died at Nazareth, both unmarried.

JOHANNA ANDERS,

MARTIN NITSCHMANN

was born in Zauchtenthal, Moravia, March 19, 1714. He went to Herrnhut in 1733 and learned the cutler's trade. Having resided for a year at Herrnhaag, he left for America in 1749. He was married, at Bethlehem, on July 15 of the same year and lived at Nazareth until August, 1755, when they joined the mission force at Gnadenhuetten. He was a quiet, industrious and useful brother and led an exemplary life. He was the first of the little martyr company on the Mahoning to give up his life, having reached the age of nearly 42 years.

SUSANNA NITSCHMANN,

whose maiden name was Weicht, was born in Roesnitz, Silesia, November 18, 1721, and was raised in the Lutheran Church. She was received into the communion of the Brethren at Herrnhut, in 1741. She came to America in 1749, one of the same company which included her future husband, Martin Nitschmann, to whom she was married in July of this year. They had two children, Martin, who died at Nazareth, and John, who later in life moved to York County, Pa., and who was the progenitor of those who, at the present day treasure the memory of their martyred forebears of Gnadenhuetten on the Mahoning.

Her ultimate fate was publicly announced at Bethlehem, July 10, 1756, when reliable information brought by the baptized Indian Joachim, confirmed previous reports.

Susanna Nitschmann was taken first to Wyoming by the savages, almost perishing from cold on the way.

Several of the baptized Indians who had withdrawn from Gnadenhuetten were living here and recognized her as a Moravian sister.

The first was Sarah, wife of Abraham the Mohican, who threw up her hands in consternation when she saw her.

Abigail, wife of Benjamin, was permitted to care for her wants in her own hut, until her brutal captor dragged her off to Tioga. There she passed her days in constant weeping and sank into a dazed condition of deep melancholy; Joachim saw her and spoke with her, and he had definite information of her death at Tioga.

The Indian who had led the attack on the Mahoning and had taken possession of her as his prize was killed in August, 1757, by another Indian under the accusation of having acted as a French spy at the treaty in Easton.

JOHANN LEONHARD GATTERMEYER,

born July 19, 1721, at Regenspurg, was of Lutheran parentage. He learned the trade of blacksmith and united with the Brethren at Ebersdorf in January, 1745. He lived at various times at Herrnhaag, Zeist and in London, Eng.

He came to Bethlehem in 1749 and in July of the same year was wedded to Dorothea Uhlmann, who departed in October, 1755, but six weeks before the tragedy on the Mahoning. After serving in many and varied capacities at Heidelberg, Gnadenthal, Shamokin and Bethlehem, he was sent as a general assistant to the Gnadenhuetten Mission, where his ability as blacksmith and his knowledge of the Indian language brought many an Indian stranger to the village and haply gave many an opportunity to hear the Gospel of Christ. He reached the age of 34 years and 4 months.

His surviving daughter died at Lititz, Pa., an unmarried sister.

a native of Fuehnen, Denmark, was born January 6, 1716. While taking an academic course in Copenhagen he became acquainted with the Brethren and resolved to devote himself to the service of the Lord in the Brethren's Church.

He entered into their communion at Herrnhaag in 1749 and in October of the same year became one of the first instructors in the Seminary at Barby. Pursuant with a call to Pennsylvania, he came to this country in September, 1753.

The following year he became one of the household at Gnadenhuetten and bent his energies, with remarkably happy results, to the acquisition of the Delaware Indian tongue and he delighted many of his friends with congratulatory stanzas in the musical language of the Unamis, on the occasion of birthday or other anniversary occasions. He served as Chaplain in this mission station and instructed the children of the Indian converts and was esteemed and beloved by his brethren, white and brown. He reached the age of nearly 39 years.

of Heidenheim, Wuertemberg, was born in 1724, entered the military service in 1744, became acquainted with several Moravians of the rank and file and determined to join the Brethren's Church as soon as his dismissal from duty would allow him. In 1748 he was received into the Church at Herrnhaag. He came to America with a colony of unmarried men in 1750. He was for several years a faithful laborer in the Economy at Bethlehem and for the past year at Gnadenhuetten as laborer and teamster.

MARTIN PRESSER,

a native of Weimar, was born September 18, 1709, and made the acquaintance of the Brethren while working at the carpenter's trade at Jena, in 1738. He united with the Church at Herrnhaag in 1740, came to America, in company with George Schweigert, in 1750, and soon made himself useful as a carpenter at Gnadenhuetten.

His services having been asked for at Christian's Spring, about a month before the massacre, he begged to be allowed to remain with the flock on the Mahoning and thus it came to pass that he laid down his life with the other mission martyrs.

JOHN FREDERICK LESLEY

was born February 29, 1732, at Conestoga, Pa. In early childhood he was placed in the care of strangers, living for a short time with a relative at Ephrata—possibly with the Valentine Leslie who figured among the "Solitary" in the cloister of the Seventh Day Baptists. He drifted to Warwick, near Lititz, when he was fourteen years of age, learned the trade of shoemaking here and at Heidelberg, and was baptized at Bethlehem, by Bishop Cammerhoff, November 13, 1748. He spent much of his time at Gnadenhuetten, taking much interest in the welfare of the Indians and becoming quite apt in their tongue.

He served faithfully in superintending the clearing of land and building fences and was occasionally dispatched as messenger to Wyoming and Shamokin. He had spent several months at Bethlehem to be cured of chills and fever until at his earnest request, he was allowed to return to the Mahoning mission, although not fully restored to health.

This was but a few weeks before the massacre, when he, too, became one of the martyrs, having reached the age of 23 years and 8 months.

The Report of the Secretary set forth the satisfactory completion of the repairs at the Cemetery at Hope, N. J., and the steps taken by the Executive Committee for the repairs and protection from further injury to the monuments at Shecomeco.

The following are the more important donations reported by the Librarian:

2 Photographs of Excavations at Nippur, Babylon, from Geo. E. Nitzsche. "The Breaking of the Dawn," "The Fall of Torngak," and "Proceedings of the Wesley Historical Society," from J. F. Pemsel, London.

"Tulip Ware of Old Pennsylvania German Potters," from J. G. Rosengarten.

"North Third Street, Philadelphia, Forty-five Years Ago," from Wm. H. Jordan.

"Bishop Cammerhof's Narrative of a Journey to Shamokin in the Winter of 1748," "Billader fra Groenland," "Kaskaskunk, the great Delaware Town on the Big Beaver River," by Daniel Agnew, L.L.D., from John W. Jordan.

Other old books, pamphlets and curios were presented by various individuals.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Bishop J. M. Levering.

Vice-Presidents, Bishop H. J. Van Vleck, Rev. Eugene Leibert, Rev. E. T. Kluge, Rev. W. H. Rice, Rev. M. W. Leibert, Rev. A. D. Thaeler, W. H. Jordan, A. R. Beck, A. S. Schropp, C. O. Brunner.

Secretary and Treasurer, Frank Kunkel.

Librarian, Rev. E. T. Kluge.

Managers, J. A. Rice, Granville Henry, A. H. Leibert, W. V. Knauss, Rev. H. A. Jacobson.

Library Committee, Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, Rev. John Greenfield, J. W. Jordan, A. S. Schropp, J. F. Bardill, Prof. J. F. Wolle.

Publication Committee, Rev. E. Leibert, Robert Rau, H. T. Clauder.

Graveyard Committee, C. E. Michael, G. A. Schneebeli, S. R. Odenwelder, F. H. Martin.

The "Vesper," at 2 p.m.

One hundred and thirty-one members and guests were present.

After the Collation, Bishop Levering, in a short address, called attention to the fact that our Society would soon celebrate the Jubilee Anniversary of its foundation (in 1856) and mentioned other impending centennial and sesqui-centennial anniversaries, the nearest of which will occur on the 24th of November next, when one hundred and fifty years will have elapsed since the massacre of the missionaries at Gnadenhuetten (now Lehighton) on the Mahoning. He then announced that the following members of the Society had passed away since the last annual meeting: Henry T. Milchsack, Charles Brodhead, Mrs. Louisa M. Meyers, Mrs. Clara Sparks Jordan, Harrison C. Lueders and Esmond H. Austin.

Bishop Levering's remarks concerning the approaching one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Gnadenhuetten massacre excited much interest, and, on motion of Rev. E. S. Wolle, the Executive Committee was requested to make arrangements for suitable commemorative exercises, to be held at the grave of the martyrs.

The following papers were read:

"Shecomeco," by Robert Rau.

"The Last of the Pequots," by Isaac Huntting, of Pine Plains, N. Y.

"Extracts from Ledger A of the Philadelphia Congregation, 1785-1833," compiled by J. W. Jordan, (read by Rev. E. T. Kluge).

The Secretary reported that the following members had been received during the year: Life Member, Mrs. Sarah C. E. Bechler, Lititz, Pa.; Active Members, Mr. and Mrs. William Turner, Miss Grace Wolle, Miss Mary J. Reichel, Mrs. Francis E. Fenner, Bethlehem; Edward C. Kern, Wymond L. Milchsack, Rev. and Mrs. John Greenfield, Miles L. Andrews, H. J. F. Reusswig, Nazareth; Miss Helen M. Henry, Boulton; Associate Member, Thomas A. L. Hay, Easton.

The Society now numbers one hundred and four life members and two hundred thirty-four active and associate members, making a total of three hundred thirty-eight.

In Memoriam.

Henry T. Milchsack.

After an illness of about two months, Henry T. Milchsack died at his home in Bethlehem on December 22, 1904, in the 77th year of his age. He was born in Bethlehem, June 19, 1828, and was the third of the four children of Augustus and Hannah Everett Milchsack, and the last surviving member of that family. He engaged in the tailoring business at Nazareth, where he also was wedded to Ellen Beitel, who departed this life in 1872. His second wife was Miss Augusta Henrietta Beitel.

He lived in Bethlehem for a number of years and was at various times tailor, telegraph operator and hotel keeper last at the American House. He is survived by his widow and five children: Thomas A., of Bethlehem, Mary, wife of Prof. E. T. Mack, of Nazareth Hall, William H., of Nazareth, and the Misses Anna and Susan Milchsack, of Bethlehem.

He became a member of the Historical Society in 1877.

Charles Brodhead.

The Hon. Charles Brodhead was born at Conyngham, Luzerne Co., Pa., August 4, 1824, and was the son of Albert Gallatin and Ellen Middaugh Brodhead. He graduated from Lafayette College with the class of 1844. He studied law in the office of his uncle, Richard Brodhead, and in the Philadelphia Law School, and he was admitted into practice at the November term of court at Easton in 1846.

In 1873 Mr. Brodhead was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania and was the originator of several valuable provisions in the revised Constitution of the State.

During the years of his residence in Bethlehem he aided materially in the development of the two boroughs.

He was married, June 1, 1858, to Miss Camilla M. Shimer. He had been in failing health for several years and entered into his rest on the last day of the year 1904.

He is survived by his widow and two children, Mrs. Warren A. Wilbur and Albert Brodhead.

Mr. Brodhead had been a member of the Historical Society since August, 1896.

Louisa M. Meyers, who had been a member of the Moravian Historical Society since August, 1899, was born at Bethlehem, on October 18, 1838, her parents being Gabriel and Lucinda E. (Luckenbach) Traeger.

She received her education in the Moravian Parochial School and the Young Ladies' Seminary. She was married on December 6, 1864, to Edward T. Meyers, who carried on the drug business in Bethlehem for over twenty-five years and who departed this life, September 22, 1885.

During the past few months she experienced signs of extreme weakness and on the morning of March 28, 1905, the sudden summons came and she departed without suffering and in full possession of her faculties. She is survived by Harry J. Meyers and Emily L., wife of Geo. Fred. Krause, of Bethlehem.

Clara W. Sparks Jordan was the daughter of Thomas and Anne E. Sparks and was born November 22, 1843. Her father, the proprietor of the Philadelphia Shot Tower and President of the Penna. Salt Manufacturing Company, had been a pupil at Nazareth Hall contemporary with Bishop A. A. Reinke, the Rev. Robt. de Schweinitz, Francis Jordan, Capt. William Mann and Stephen R. Mallory. He was a friend of the Moravian Church, attended the Nazareth Hall reunions and left a bequest to the Moravian Theological Seminary.

The subject of this sketch was married to William H. Jordan, April 20, 1881. Although a devoted member of the Episcopal Church, she always enjoyed the services of the Moravian Church and once remarked to Bishop C. L. Moench that "she was an Episcopalian but loved the Moravians." She was of an amiable disposition, kind hearted and always happy to contribute to any worthy object.

She passed away at the residence of her brother-in-law, in Germantown, Pa., on June 21, 1905, leaving no issue.

She became a member of the Historical Society on May 4, 1882.

Harrison C. Lueders.

Died in Philadelphia, Pa., on July 8, 1905, Harrison C. Lueders, son of the late Thomas L. Lueders, aged 55 years.

In Brother Lueders the First Church in Philadelphia has lost a valued and loyal member.

By his large circle of friends and business associates he was honored and beloved for his sincerity and simplicity, his enthusiasm, which he carried into his church work as well as into his business, and for his sound judgment and benevolent spirit; and by all who knew him he is held in grateful and sacred remembrance.

He had joined the Historical Society in August, 1904, but a year before his demise.

Esmond H. Austin

was born in Philadelphia, August 2, 1853, and was the son of John B. Austin, President of the Southwark National Bank. He received his education at Dr. John Ferris' School on Dean St., below Locust, and entered the service of the United Security Life Insurance and Trust Company as Assistant Secretary in 1895.

He married a daughter of James Moore, proprietor of the Bush Hill Iron Works. His widow, one son and two daughters survive him.

He had, for some years, been a partner with Joseph H. Traeger in the dry-goods and grocery business in Bethlehem. Death, caused by heart failure, came upon him suddenly on August 2, 1905.

Mr. Austin joined the Moravian Historical Society in 1880.
